KANSAS CITY, June 17.—(AP)—Blazing machine guns turned Kansas City's Union station plaza into a scene of horror today as seven officers and a prisoner were ambushed, five of them killed outright and two others wounded in a brief but deadly burst of fire.

The wholesale killings resulted from an effort to release or slay Frank Nash, notorious Oklahoma train robber and killer, being returned to the federal prison at Leavenworth, where he escaped three years ago.

When the murderous rattle of machine gun bullets ceased, Nash, Oklahoma desperado, was crumpled dead in an automobile he had entered the moment of the attack. Lifeless about him were:

Raymond J. Caffrey, special agent of the United States bureau of investigation.

Otto Reed, chief of police at McAlester, Okla.

Frank Greenman, Kansas City detective.

W. J. Grooms, Kansas City detective.

The wounded were F. J. Lackey, special agent at Oklahoma City, of the United States bureau of investigation, whose condition is considered critical, and R. E. Vetterli, agent in charge of the Kansas City bureau of investigation, who returned to the station after the attack.

Lackey was shot three times in the back. Vetterli suffered a slight wound in the left arm.

Nash, a member of the Al Spencer gang which terrorized northeast Oklahoma 10 years ago, was arrested by agents of the bureau of investigation, department of justice, at Hot Springs, Ark., yesterday after a long and relentless search.

"I don't believe they intended to kill Nash," Vetterli said in recounting the details of the slaughter, apparently staged by four men armed with machine guns who had hidden their selves near the officers' car and calmly waited for them to group themselves about the automobile.

"We went to the station to meet the officers who were bringing Nash back from Hot Springs," Vetterli continued.

"Raymond Caffrey and I drove to the station in his car. The two Kansas City detectives, Greenman and Grooms, drove to the station in their car. We met the Missouri Pacific train and started over to Caffrey's car. Headed south on the station drive across from the east door of the station.

"There were eight of us, including Nash, the prisoner and seven officers. We were to enter Caffrey's car and the Kansas City detectives were to follow us to Leavenworth in their car."

"I was standing at the rear and west side of Caffrey's car. In the back seat were Lackey and Smith, the agents from Oklahoma City. Otto Reed, chief of police at McAlester, who came up with the prisoner.

"Caffrey was to drive. Nash had sat in the driver's seat temporarily until the car was loaded and then he was to move over into the other front seat, which was folded up to allow the three men to enter the rear seat. "Caffrey stood on the pavement beside Nash on the east side of the car waiting for Nash to slide over."

Board of 5 To Adjust Claims of Ga. Farmers

WASHINGTON, June 17.—(AP)—Following a conference today with officials of the federal farm credit administration, Representative Emmet Owen, of Georgia, announced that a decision had been reached to appoint a board of five members to adjust differences between the federal agency and Georgia farmers involving claims growing out of the sale of cotton through the co-operatives to the old federal farm board.

Representative Owen said between $125,000 and $130,000 is involved in the claims, affecting two or three thousand Georgia farmers.

Governor Henry Morganthau Jr., of the farm board administration, is scheduled to name the board next week. At least three members of the board are expected to come from Georgia, the remaining two being identified with the administration set-up here.

$100,000 RANSOM PAID TO KIDNAPERS OF RICH BREWER

ST. PAUL, June 17.—(AP)—Hope of freeing William Hamm Jr., millionaire president of the Theodore Hamm Brewing Company, held by kidnapers for $100,000 ransom under a threat of death, tomorrow was expressed tonight by H. J. Charles, attorney for the company.

Charles indicated that a part or all of the ransom money, which probably will be less than $100,000, had been given to the kidnapers.

Upon Charles' return from a rendezvous he said that he had not been more than two blocks away from the brewery premises and asserted that though he did not contact the abductors some of the negotiators did. He refused to disclose their identities.

He said he did not have any idea as to how many men were in the gang that spirited away the 39-year-old president of the Hamm Brewing Company Thursday noon and declined to divulge the contents of the ransom notes.

"However, we have made arrangements which we hope will bring Mr. Hamm back in the morning," he concluded. "We have definitely made contact with the abductors through telephone calls and another note."

Charles and other negotiators then left for their homes and refused further information, but he returned to the brewery company premises shortly after he had instructed his chauffeur, P. L. Schuler, to tell newspapermen that he would not be back for some time.

St. Paul police, convinced that the kidnapping is the work of the Barker-Karpis gang, suspected head of a middle west kidnaping gang responsible for two other similar abductions, were ostensibly on the alert for the family to obtain Hamm's release.

Hamm was kidnapped about noon Thursday at the doorstep of his home. He had just walked from the brewery about four blocks away.

No less than 20 employees and persons obtaining charity from a relief office saw him strolling along.

Not a suspected abductor, Hamm was wrong, even when Hamm was seen a few minutes later riding with at least two other men in an automobile bearing Pennsylvania license plates. Four and one-half hours later, Dunn answered his home telephone and a man's voice said that Hamm was being held for $100,000 ransom.

Dunn at first thought it was a joke. He finally notified police.

The abduction was kept secret and a trap was laid with policemen surrounding the Dunn home.

Roads run across it to south Georgia and to Warm Springs where is located "The Little White House," part-time home of President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

And on Pine mountain today is probably the most famous farm in the agricultural history of the nation. Or at least it is a farm destined to attain that measure of fame. It is a farm where a man of great vision went into the business of practical farming to see what the actual problems were.

It is the farm owned and personally supervised by President Roosevelt. It was his experimental station. It was there he tested many of the things which he later, as president, included in his masterly agricultural program.

The cry for farm relief has been loudest during the period when Roosevelt was purchasing and developing his farm. While the lobbies and individuals were dining on relief into congressional and presidential ears, Roosevelt was going quietly about the business of planning a farm and making it show a profit.

He was accumulating knowledge as to crops and marketing conditions. But most of all, he was showing a profit on his books. Years later when he was to have dinner into his ears the demand for relief he was able to approach the subject with knowledge and understanding.

There were some of his critics who said he knew nothing of farming. They asked on what basis he placed many of his proposals.

Roosevelt, Georgia Farmer, Goes to the Soil to Learn Of Agriculture's Problems

WASHINGTON, June 17.—(AP)—Agreements among more than half a dozen major industries to raise wages, stabilize hours of work and ban sales below cost of production were understood tonight to be nearing completion for submission to Hugh S. Johnson, administrator of the national recovery act.

Out of weeks of conferences came authoritative reports that announcements would be ready soon which would affect millions of workers and set in motion definitely the machinery upon which President Roosevelt rests much of his expectation of ending the depression.

Representatives of textiles, iron and steel, automobiles, coal, clothing, electrical supplies and other key industries have been in touch directly with Johnson and his staff of co-ordinators in the last few days. Over the country other meetings are going ahead.

And out of them, officials forecast, will come some tangible results in curbing unemployment and increasing purchasing power.

July to Bring Upwings.

President Roosevelt expressed the hope before his departure from Washington that "the 10 major industries which control the bulk of industrial employment can submit their simple basis codes at once and that the country can look forward to the month of July as the beginning of our great national movement back to work."

It was indicated that in a few weeks Spaulding, who has been handling the exploratory work and has built up the engineering organization, would be named permanent administrator of public works.

Surprising most of these familiar with the organization before the bill was actually signed, President Roosevelt named Colonel Donald H. Sawyer, chairman of the federal employment stabilization board, as temporary administrator of public works.

Within the next few days a list of state administrators of the construction program will be submitted to the cabinet advisory committee headed by Secretary Ickes. With their appointment the bulk of the machinery for encouraging state, county and municipal projects through grants of 20 per cent of the cost of labor and materials will have been created.

Johnson returned to his desk late today after an attempt to fly to Chicago yesterday to address the coal operators. Getting only as far as Pittsburgh, he transmitted his message from there and returned to the capital.

With his coming, employees who have worked with him for weeks are hoping they would soon obtain an official status which would place them on the pay roll. Dozens of workers were taken on a voluntary basis with the hope that they would have jobs later, but thus far Johnson has given no official appointments.

Relief Committee To Meet Tuesday

The newly appointed committee which will supervise relief work in Georgia will map its program at a meeting Tuesday with Governor Eugene Talmadge and Herman De La Perriere, state relief director, it was announced Saturday by A. Steve Nance, vice chairman of the committee.

The committee will have no announcement to make regarding its future plans until after Tuesday's meeting with the governor, Nance said.

Members of the committee conferred Thursday in Washington with Harry L. Hopkins, the new national relief administrator.

Wallace plans to put the cotton tax into effect on August 1, at the beginning of the marketing year.

Meanwhile, with the wheat program providing maximum processing taxes already outlined, administrators turned to another big problem of application of the adjustment act—corn and hogs.

At Quincy, late in the day, he stopped to speak a few words for the throng which gathered in the downtown in front of the home of the former President Adams. Here, he recalled his visits as assistant secretary of the navy, to the ship yards in Quincy, during the World War.

And I hope," he added, "in the next few months we will start building some more American ships."

In ordering his recovery program into operation just before departing from Washington yesterday, Mr.

WETS, DRYERS CLAIM VICTORY IN IOWA

Voters Will Cast Ballots on Repeal Measure Tuesday.

DES MOINES, Iowa, June 17.—(AP) Both sides expressed equal confidence of victory as they launched last-minute drives tonight before Iowa's special election Tuesday on the question of repeal of national prohibition.

Repealists pinned hopes of placing Iowa alongside the 11 states which have previously ratified the twenty-first amendment, superseding the eighteenth amendment, on a heavier than normal vote.

Prohibition leaders, anxious that Iowa be the first state to refuse to ratify repeal, also professed to see success in a large turnout. Rallies and gatherings over the state tomorrow and Monday are to stress "get out the vote" efforts.

The anti-repeal outlook was outlined by Dr. J. W. Graves, executive secretary of the All-Iowa Prohibition Emergency Committee, who declared that "if the womanhood and farmers of Iowa register their opinion victory is assured."

Judge E. G. Moon, co-chairman of the Iowa Repeal for Prosperity Committee, declared ratification of repeal in Iowa, "in our opinion, will assure repeal of the eighteenth amendment."

"It's repeal vote will have an important effect on results in other states, particularly Kansas," he said. "The important thing is the election, from our standpoint, is getting out the vote."

Predictions that the vote might run around the 500,000 mark recalled that in 1917 when the legislature submitted a state constitutional amendment against manufacture and sale of intoxicating beverages, the total was near 430,000. At that time Iowa voters defeated the proposed amendment, 215,625 to 214,936.

Iowa then was dry, however, so Iowa having been closed since January 1, 1919.

The national constitutional amendment ratified by the Iowa legislature went into effect in 1933. In voting to legalize 3.2 beer, this year, the general assembly dealt the first blow at the state's prohibitory statutes, which have tended to become more rigid in the 17 years the state has been dry.

Governor Clyde L. Herring, who has predicted Iowa will vote for repeal, in a speech today pledged his administration to the enactment of liquor control legislation at a special session of the assembly this fall, if repeal is ratified by the voters.

NEW HAMPSHIRE TO VOTE ON DRY LAW CHANGE TUESDAY
CONCORD, N. H., June 17.—(AP) New Hampshire voters on Tuesday will ballot to ratify or reject the twenty-first amendment.

The present legislature has leaned toward repeal, the new 3.2 per cent beer was allowed to be sold by vote of the lawmakers and another bill, which would permit sale of 6 per cent beer and wines to be sold if the dry law was repealed, was passed by both houses. This bill awaits the signature or veto of Governor John G. Winant.

One repeal delegates will oppose one for retention of the law by each of the 10 New Hampshire counties. Later the delegates chosen will be called by Governor Winant to ratify the twenty-first amendment nearest its end today with little general interest. Election of delegates to the ratification convention will be held Tuesday.

Two states of delegates, one representing the repeal forces, the other drys, will be offered. Delegates will be elected from each of the 35 senatorial districts, and 15 will be elected at large.

Both sides are urging a heavy vote, with the wets claiming victory.

SHOUSE SEES VICTORY FOR DRY LAW CHANGE
WASHINGTON, June 17.—(AP) Joseph Shouse, president of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, said in a statement today that there was a possibility of prohibition repeal elections in 41 states this year.

If these were held, he said he could "confidently predict repeal before the end of 1933."

"We expect to add three additional states next week to the ranks of the prohibition repeal column, bringing the total number to 14," he said.

"Iowa, New Hampshire and Connecticut will vote on Tuesday. Our reports from all of them are most encouraging."

"During the week two additional states set dates for repeal elections to be held this year—Arizona, October 3 and Idaho on September 19. Attorney-General McKittrick, of Missouri, ruled that the state referendum law does not apply to the weeks set providing for a repeal election and it is likely Governor Park will call an election in August."

You are not mistaken. Your eyesight is not in need of glasses. Your mental faculties are not disarranged. Whom you see as the winner of the Cavendish Club tournament is correct.

Yes, gentle and rough readers of this rambling plot of type, Miss Peggy (better late than never) Porter finally crashed into the winning circle.

Many a 90-day note has become overdue and many a bridge player has gone hungry since the crisis of the anxious readers of this column beheld such an announcement. Once upon a time Peggy used to win tournaments, but not since the mind of men runneth to the contrary and she played slow dogs at the St. Petersburg races has her name been flashed as a winner.

In company with Bill Meador, who is winning entirely too many tournaments these days, Peggy bounced to victory Friday evening. If I had her picture I would gladly run it, for as a hard-boiled newspaperman would say, "That is real news."

Maxie, who has many troubles, including baseball parlays and slow horses, has cut Meador's price to very short odds. "You fence jumpers who think you can take me for a good thing on this Bill Meador and get odd odds against him had better find another bookmaker," quoth the irate Maxie.

"From now on Meador, the Yankees and Equipoise are the same price in my book," continued the famous little prognosticator. So saying, he turned his attention to other worries, including who would work for the Crackers.

All bridge clubs going strong and tournaments better than ever. One would think that the summer would dim the enthusiasm of the players. Either the brethren have not the money to go out of town or indulge in more expensive amusement, or the duplicate fever has them fast in its embrace. Whatever the reason, there are plenty of tournaments, plenty of players to play in them and lots of rubber games in the afternoons and evenings.

The Cavendish did a big week in rubber play and both the team-of-four and pair tournaments were well attended. Ed Nix, at the Henry Grady Bridge Club, reports a fine week in rubber play at his new station and his tournament Tuesday evening was a large one.

And this coming week sees the opening of the Georgia Bridge Club on the roof of the Atlanta hotel. Mrs. Emma McDaniel, the popular tournament hostess, whose tournaments at her home on Juniper street were such a pleasant feature to the bridge life of the city, will be in charge. From all indications this new club will be delightful in every respect.

The hotel is putting in elaborate improvements to make the club attractive in every way. Play will take place in the open air if the weather is fair and inside when it is inclement. Mrs. McDaniel will cater to both rubber and duplicate play. More will be said about this club in my next article after I have had a chance to see it in operation.

My idea of an ideal tournament would be to have all players play with the speed of Mrs. Allan Gottschmidt. You never see her hold up the play by discussing hands or fumbling cards or long deliberation over some play. With the exception of one player, she is the fastest duplicate performer in town. Her influence is felt in any tournament and on her partners. Even Mrs. Willine Tarpy plays fast when opposite Mrs. Gottschmidt. Many a tournament director would be made happy if all players were like Mrs. Gottschmidt.

The West End tournament, held in the clubhouse of the West End Golf Club, is still going strong. Large attendance at each session. Looks like to me, however, that this Bob Hollingsworth is a sort of champion out in that district. Not many tournaments that his name is not first or second.

Have to cut off at this period and gird up my loins, array myself in finest linen and hie unto the Druid Hills Golf Club where the Tip Top Club of Decatur is holding its weekly tournament. Recent reports inform me that there will be at least a dozen tables. Many of the talent from Atlanta will go out and give battle with the Decatur bridge experts. Know we all will have a good time.

Robert R. Otis, leading Atlanta real estate man and for the past two years chairman of the city planning commission, Saturday asked Mayor James L. Key to accept his resignation as a chairman and as a member of the commission.

Otis cited the pressure of private matters as his reason for quitting. The letter was filed with Acting Mayor Alvin L. Richards and will be held for action of Key when he returns to Atlanta. Otis attempted to relinquish his position in January, but the mayor insisted that he continue to serve.

MINNEAPOLIS, June 17.—(AP)—A Minnesota Holstein cow is the new champion butter producing cow of the world, offices of F. E. Murphy announced today.

The cow is Femco Johanna Bess Fayne, bred and owned at Femco farms near Breckenridge, Minn. The animal this week completed an official record of 1,510 pounds of butter and 33,649 of milk in 365 days and becomes one of the five cows in dairy history to produce in that period over 1,500 pounds of butter, the announcement said.

INDUSTRIAL HEADS MEET WEDNESDAY

Plans for Self-Regulation Under Recovery Act Will Be Formulated.

Plans for self-regulation as required under the industrial recovery act passed by congress and signed by the president will be formulated at a meeting of all industrial concerns and allied lines of trade at 3 o'clock Wednesday afternoon at the Chamber of Commerce building, according to announcement by Herbert E. Choate, president of the chamber.

Commenting on the importance of the legislation, Mr. Choate said it "is the most important and far-reaching legislation ever enacted by congress for helping and protecting business."

He added that the scheduled meeting will afford many industrial concerns the first opportunity to receive an explanation of the provisions of the new law.

Mr. Choate said that a majority of individual industries are wondering what will be required of them under the new law and that every effort would be made to answer questions accurately and to outline in a general way the steps which each field of work should take in order to have a voice in the trade agreements that will eventually be submitted to Washington.

Concerning the complexities of the measure, Mr. Choate said some time will elapse before anyone will have a complete understanding of it.

"However," said Mr. Choate, "judging by the text of the act, there is every reason to believe that not only will the law directly affect industry, but also will make its influence felt substantially with the distributor, the wholesaler, the retailer and the consumer. It represents the most ambitious program ever undertaken to bring relief to millions of unemployed, to put business on a profitable basis by stopping unfair competition, and to obtain at the same time a living for both labor and industry."

Mr. Choate explained that the law would attempt to secure results by proposing limitation of working hours, establishment of minimum wage scales and to stop the demoralizing effect of price-cutting. The meeting Wednesday will be open to all who wish to attend.

175 Jinky Winners Are Listed In Full Page in Today's Paper

By THE JINKY EDITOR.

One hundred and seventy-five Jinky fans will receive the thrill that comes once in a lifetime when they turn to the full page in today's Constitution, in which the names of winners in the Jinky contest are announced.

These 175 winners may call at Jinky headquarters Monday or later in the week to claim their prizes. The tickets to the theaters must all be used during the week, so it is advisable to call early in the week.

Again this week the contest is on at full speed, and starting Thursday contestants may vie for an extra award of 250 free receipts for each person who enters one or more Jinkies from each of the stores co-operating in the contest.

Next Sunday the standing of the 25 leading contestants will be published, so that these fans may see how they are progressing for the two free trips to Chicago. This will be interesting information, as many of the contestants have entered a great number and naturally are interested in seeing just how they stand.

There has been more interest in the Jinky contest than anyone could possibly imagine. How many Jinkies do you think have been given away by the various stores?

Atlanta Milk Men Will Meet Monday

Milk producers and distributors of the Atlanta area will have a meeting at 2:30 o'clock Monday afternoon at the courthouse on the proposed temporary milk price stabilization agreement, it was announced Saturday. The meeting was called by A. S. Vance, president of the Georgia Pure Milk League, representing the producers, and A. E. Swann, president of the Pure Milk Association, representing the distributors.

It is the aim of the two groups to effect a temporary stabilization until Secretary of Agriculture Wallace announces his decision on a permanent price agreement for the Atlanta area.

FIGHTING FORCES OF ARMY INTACT

$50,000,000 Saving Will Not Cut Single Man or Gun From Ranks

WASHINGTON, June 17.—(P)—Without reducing the number of its officers and enlisted men, the army has worked out a plan for saving $50,000,000 in the coming fiscal year as compared with the last corresponding period which closes at the end of the month.

It plans to spend $225,000,000 on its departmental and military activities, which do not include rivers and harbors developments. The outlay this year is estimated at $275,000,000.

Announcing the cuts, the war department said every effort had been made to absorb them in such a way as would minimize any consequent impairment of the national defense.

"The detailed analysis of reductions," the department said, "discloses that the retrenchments relate primarily to living expenses, maintenance and operation costs, material and new equipment, with some curtailment of training and development studies. All components of the army of the United States will have less funds. However, each is retained without reduction in its fighting personnel."

"The regular army will omit its normal field training activities, including target practice, will reduce its flying training, suspend many of its supply, arsenal and depot activities, its research and development studies, its re-equipment, including aircraft, and its armament activities as well as certain curtailments in its motor and animal programs."

"It will also have to reduce expenditures for its employees and clerks—field employees at arsenals, depots and posts will be seriously affected."

"The national guard will retain its existing personnel and will continue to do all field and partial army training. While the national guard will have to suspend some of its activities, it is estimated that the funds available will limit all training to training and at least 12, and probably 20, army training drills."

"The reserve officers training corps will be maintained but with curtailment in supplies, uniforms, equipment and about one-third reduction in its summer training camps activity."

"The organized reserve is now associated with the regular army in the civilian conservation corps work."

"The citizens' military training camps will be held as scheduled but with a reduction in attendance to meet the limited funds available. This reduction will limit all training to candidates who have had previously at least one summer's training in the citizens' military training camps."

"The army school system, which provides schooling for all components, including West Point and air cadets, will continue."

MAJESTIC FACTORIES WORKING OVERTIME

Le Roi J. Williams, vice president and general manager of the Grigsby-Grumow Company, manufacturers of Majestic refrigerators, radios and tubes, said that his factories are continuing to work overtime and Sunday operations to meet the demands brought about by the constructive policies of President Roosevelt's new deal.

"Majestic radio shipments so far this month are already double those of all last June and the production schedule is more than five times radio shipments for last June," he said.

"Our radio production schedule for this month has not been equalled in June since 1929."

"June shipments of Majestic refrigerators are ahead of last year, and our refrigerator schedules for next month have not been equalled in July for two years."

NEW TOBACCO BODY FORMED IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, June 17.—(P)—The National Association of Retail Tobaccoists was organized today at a meeting held in conjunction with the annual convention of the National Association of Tobacco Distributors.

William A. Hollingsworth, elected permanent chairman of the new organization, said it planned to develop a code of ethics for the retail tobacco trade to present at Washington.

"The government wants a code representative of the entire industry," he said, "and as the retailers are the real cash registers of the industry, any code must depend largely on what the retailers do. The code must be fair to both the distributors and to the public."

The meeting was attended by about 150 delegates said to represent 800,000 retailers throughout the country.

Here, each summer, a hundred boys have the time of their lives for two months. The camp this year will have Pete Gracey and Don Zimmerman, famous All-American football stars, as counselors. A number of Atlanta boys will attend this summer, James D. Collins Jr., local representative, reported.

Experience of Others Warning To You to Take Out Insurance

Do not fall into errors. Take warning from the experience of others.

"Five Persons Killed in Southern Mischance"

"Truck Hits Wagon, Killing Two Negroes"

"Accidents Send Six to Grady Hospital"

"Truck Crash Fatal"

All the above copied from headlines which appeared in The Constitution only a short time ago. What happens to one may happen to another. You may be standing on the brink of eternity. Today or tomorrow may bring disaster to you. The accident wave, growing every day and sweeping every part of the country, respects no person.

Be prepared. Insure yourself in order to protect the future of your wife and loved ones against suffering and abrupt termination of income.

Arthur Douglas, Cedarhurst, Ga., was injured in an automobile wreck some time ago. The accident wave, growing every day and sweeping every part of the country, respects no person.

Mrs. Francis Shikany, of Atlanta, was injured in an automobile wreck on the Athens highway some time ago, was totally disabled for three weeks, and was paid $200.

The insurance offered you through The Atlanta Constitution is issued by the North American Accident Insurance Company, of Chicago. This company, during the last several years, has paid to Constitution subscribers and members of their families over $100,000.

The insurance is offered to subscribers and immediate dependent members of a subscriber's family between the ages of 15 and 68 on the one subscription going into the home at the small registration fee of 20 cents with application and 10 cents per month thereafter in addition to the subscription price, or $1 each per policy per year in advance, to subscribers who live in Atlanta; and to subscribers outside Atlanta and suburbs the rates is $1 per year per policy in addition to the subscription price.

The policy The Constitution offers you provides for payment of sums ranging downward from $10,000 for travel, $1,000 for auto and pedestrian deaths resulting from certain specific accidents, heavy sums for permanent injuries, and $10 weekly indemnity for total disability resulting from accidents set forth in the policy, which is at the rate of $12.33 per month. All this for the small fee, as stated above—just about 2-1/2 cents a week—and it is offered to old and new subscribers alike.

In sending application for insurance, the applicant must state name in full, give age and occupation, and if beneficiary is desired the full Christian name of beneficiary must be given and relationship to the insured.

Urban League Bulletin

A glance at the 1930 census shows a number of very interesting developments in regard to population changes among negroes. Four significant changes can be noticed in this population shift. These changes are as follows:

1. For the past 110 years the percentage of negroes in the total population has been gradually decreasing. In 1810 they formed 19 per cent of the population, and in 1930 they were only 9.7 per cent of the population.

2. While this decrease in their relative numbers has taken place, their actual number has increased between 1920 and 1930 by 13.6 per cent, or 1,428,012, the largest gain on record. Compared with the previous decade, when the increase was 6.5 per cent, the 1920-1930 record represents a gain of more than 100 per cent.

3. The third significant change was the shift from rural to urban centers. The only important city in the south whose negro population decreased was Richmond, Va. In a number of northern cities such as Spokane, Wash.; Lowell, Mass.; and New Bedford, Mass.; Providence, R. I., where the negro population has never been a large one, there also were losses. This means that the negro is rapidly becoming a city dweller. From an urban population of less than 20 per cent in 1890, now more than 40 per cent live in the cities. While the white rural population in 1920 had increased by 2,000,000 the negro rural population lost more than 200,000. Between 1920 and 1930 there was an increase of 3,600,000 in the number of negroes living in cities, which brings the total number of negro city dwellers to 5,193,913.

Although there was a great increase in the urban population, the vast majority of negroes still reside in the south. Thus in 1930 the 11,891,143 negroes in the United States 9,361,577 or 78 per cent of the total negro population lived in the south, representing 27 per cent of the total southern population.

4. The fourth significant movement is a definite moving away from the south to the north. The relative movement of negroes to the east, north central, middle Atlantic and Pacific coast regions was greatly in excess of the average movement to these sections. The increase of negroes was in excess of 75 per cent, whereas for whites it was considerably less than 20 per cent.

Notwithstanding the increase in negro population in practically all the cities there is a decided concentration in the important industrial centers, both north and south.

Georgia offers some very significant figures in regard to this population change. The total population of Georgia shows a gain of 124,714 in the 1930 census over 1920. In an analysis of the census we find that although there was a gain of 147,890 whites from 1920 to 1930, there was a loss of 135,240 negroes during that same period. Further analysis shows us that although the state lost more than 10 per cent of its negro population during this 10-year period, a number of cities within the state gained population. The shift from the farm to the city, Atlanta stands well as an example. We note a gain of 27,279 in its colored population during this period.

To explain all of the reasons for these four population shifts, this column will permit, but suffice to say our present general economic breakdown and desire to change from a rural to an urban, or from a southern to a northern environment, are the two outstanding reasons for these population shifts. Each of these, particularly the latter, would require more than a statement to be fully understood.

JUNIOR HADASSAH TO HOLD EXHIBIT OF RASKIN'S WORKS

Brought to this city under auspices of the local chapter of Junior Hadassah, Saul Raskin, internationally known artist of New York, will exhibit more than 75 of his paintings in Atlanta for one week beginning Thursday evening.

Educated in the art academies of Odessa, Paris, Berlin and New York, Mr. Raskin is a life member of the American Watercolor Society, and a member of the New York Watercolor Society. His works are represented in the metropolitan museum of New York, the Brooklyn museum, and the Newark museum, and he has exhibited at National Academy of Design and the Penobscot Institute of Chicago.

Mr. Raskin has made two trips to Palestine and among his most notable drawings are striking interpretations of the "City of Jerusalem," "The Walling Wall," and "Mother Rachel's Grave." Combining the modernistic with the conservative, Mr. Raskin, while excelling in water colors, also does lithograph etchings, dry points, color drawings and monotypes water-colors and oils. On a tour of the principal cities in the south he has been widely acclaimed, and his works are said to have attracted much favorable comment, due in part to his diversity of mediums and subjects.

The exhibit in Atlanta will be the principal feature of Junior Hadassah's cultural activities for the summer months. Miss Rose Cohn is chairman of the project.

Idaho Supreme Court Holds Beer Is Illegal

BOISE, Idaho, June 17.—(P)—The state supreme court ruled today that beer, near-beer or any kind of malt, vinous, fermented or spirituous liquors are illegal in Idaho.

The state legislature will meet Monday in special session on the call of Governor C. Ben Ross to consider legalizing 3.2 beer and other beverages containing not more than 3.2 per cent alcohol.

Or the motorist may stop on the shores of the beautiful mountain lake, several miles long, at Blue Ridge, where picnic lunches can be spread beside the water, mountains climbing into the blue skies on all sides.

Leaving Atlanta, the party may motor to Gainesville, via Lawrenceville and Buford, on to Cleveland and Neel's Gap and then to Blue Ridge. The route is down the mountains to Ellijay, Jasper, Tate, Canton and Marietta to Atlanta.

The trip may be made easily in a day over good paved roads all the way except for three short strips of improved all-weather highways. The motor club recommends this trip for an outing during this summer, on the motorist should not miss while long days give him the most in the great out of doors.

SHERIFF, CAPTIVE OF FLOYD, FREED

Missouri Officer Released by Bandit After 500- Mile Ride.

BOLIVAR, Mo., June 17.—(P)—Unharmful after a 500-mile ride as the hostage of Charles (Pretty Boy) Floyd, Sheriff William (Jack) Killingsworth expressed belief here today that the notorious outlaw had not taken part in the slaying of four officers and Frank Nash, another Oklahoma desperado, in Kansas City.

Killingsworth was released by Floyd last night near Lees Summit, Mo., southeast of Kansas City.

Polk county sheriff said Floyd and his companions may have participated in the killing of Sheriff Roger Wilson, of Boone county, and Sergeant Ben Booth, of the state highway patrol, last Wednesday.

Wilson and Booth were slain by men they sought to question at a highway intersection in the outskirts of Columbia less than an hour after a Mexico, Mo., bank had been robbed.

Killingsworth said conversation between Floyd and Adam Richetti, his gunman accomplice, during the wild dash yesterday in commandeered automobiles indicated they had been in Missouri at least two weeks.

The sheriff was kidnapped yesterday after he walked unsuspectingly into a garage where Floyd and Richetti were having a motor car repaired.

Declaring "I just can't talk more freely about the ride," Sheriff Killingsworth said "Floyd seemed as clean as a fellow as I ever run into, outside of his record. He treated me nicer than I ever expected."

Killingsworth said he believed Floyd and Richetti were somewhere north of Warsaw, Mo. "I think they've got a hideout up there," he added.

"I don't believe they had anything to do with the Kansas City killing this morning. I think they are figuring on 'holing in' somewhere for a while."

Where the sheriff was reluctant to say where he was released.

"I promised Floyd I wouldn't tell," the sheriff said when asked why he did not notified officers immediately after his release. "My action is what any man with sense ought to do. They might come back some time and I am not going to take any chances."

Those men are killers, he added. "They told me I would be safe if I would direct them to safety."

"Then the highway patrol got right behind us. They stuck a gun in my side and told me to wave them back. I was more than willing."

"What worried me from the start was the boys would try to help me out."

The sheriff said Floyd compelled him to flag a car near Deepwater, Mo. The outlaws took the machine and abandoned the one in which they escaped from Bolivar.

The driver of the machine, a man whose name Killingsworth did not obtain, was taken prisoner and released with the sheriff last night.

"We stopped for several hours in the afternoon and then drove some more before I was released."

"Floyd told me to take the golf bags he left in the car they abandoned at the garage here, so I would have something to remember him. I told him I wouldn't need anything to remember him."

MOTOR CLUB HERE RECOMMENDS TRIP TO MOUNTAIN AREA

North Georgia's mountains, with their streams and lakes, their foliage and timber and wild life, call to the motorist any Sunday. A trip from Atlanta to Blue Ridge, up one route

SIX-WEEK RACE WON BY NARROW MARGIN

MONTREAL, June 17.—The story of a six weeks' race finally won by the narrow margin of 7 hours and 43 minutes reached here yesterday with the arrival of passengers who crossed from the Orient recently. There was no crowding at the rails, the contestants did not bunt at the bars, and the race instead of being all over in a few minutes took six weeks and covered 15,000 miles.

The steeds were S. S. President Cleveland, with Captain Maynard Griffith up, and R. M. S. Empress of Asia with Captain A. V. R. Lovegrove in the saddle. They left Victoria together seven weeks ago, and abandoned the one in which they escaped from Bolivar.

On the homestead the President Cleveland left Yokohama a full hour ahead of the Empress of Asia and was nearly 20 miles in the lead when Captain Lovegrove and his thoroughbred left the marine paddock. So closely were the two ships matched that for four days the passengers of either ship could not see the others.

Finally the Empress of Asia overhauled and passed the President Cleveland to reach Victoria nearly 8 hours ahead of the first starter.

AMERICANS KNOW LESS ABOUT LIVING THAN EUROPEANS

According to the stimulating new travel booklet just recently published by the Trans-Atlantic Steamship Lines, statistics show that the United States has many widows and but few elderly men, whereas Europe has many elderly women and men. All of which seems to prove that the American man, however much he may know about business, can learn a lot about living through first-hand contact with his European brother.

To quote: "Our pace in business is too exhausting. Our men know too little of relaxation. Even when they play, they play furiously. When they retire from business, they have too few other interests to keep life zestful. They don't enjoy 'the last of life, for which the first was made.' Most of them die 'in harness,' and of those who retire from harness, many do not survive the first year of retirement."

"In Europe, men have hobbies—things they love to do—and from an early age they plan to work just long enough to earn money sufficient to doze, their sons and daughters, and enable themselves to enjoy middle age and old age, doing the things they care most about."

The whole business picture now is changed—because the public has started in not only to buy, but to buy selectively—to seek out not merely low price, but sound substantial value as well.

EXIT THE CHISELER!

FOR more than three years American business has been bleeding to death internally under the reckless thrusts of the price-cutter.

Whole industries have suffered from the ruthless raiding of lone wolf members—who smashed prices down, down, down, in a savage attempt to chisel business away from competitors at any price.

Everyone knows what happened before the withering blast of falling prices. Standards faltered. Quality went under siege. Payrolls shriveled. Buying-power shrunk. The very weapon used to produce more business steadily produced less.

Now suddenly the whole picture is changed.

IT is changed because the public has started in not only to buy, but to buy selectively—to seek out not merely low price, but sound substantial value as well.

It is changed because men and women have learned that the wrong thing at the right price is not a bargain—that quality even more than price determines worth—that good merchandise, at a fair price, is shrewder buying than poor merchandise at any price.

Behold the results already discernible in a few short weeks!

HOPE revives, ambition stirs, purpose hardens—commodity prices rise constructively—markets are expanding—the manufacture of enterprise and conscience can once more center upon the improvement and perfection of his product instead of being forced to match pennies with his least responsible competitor.

Men are marching back to work—here and there wages have already started up—business is definitely on the mend.

The nation thrills to a new purpose and a new comprehension that fearlessly say that for the benefit of all—farmer, laborer and businessman alike—prices must go higher not lower—and the whole power of constructive administration in finance, industry and government is pledged to make this happen.

People have begun to buy again—with new confidence that the prices they pay today will not crumble tomorrow.

Your buying, your selective buying, is speeding the exit of the chiseler from industry of every kind—and as a direct reward for buying now, you can still get first-quality favorably-known merchandise at prices which you may never see again.

Take tires as an example—you can buy a whole set of Goodyear All-Weathers, most popular tires in the world, for as little as a single tire would cost you a few years ago!

This is the Goodyear All-Weather, which outsells any other tire in the world. Even throughout the times of stress, Goodyear has kept faith with the public by lifting its quality steadily higher, but today you can still buy this tire—the best tire we have ever made—for prices starting as low as $6.40.

BUT the real way to buy is with your eyes on the future and not on the past.

And anyone with eyes to see what is happening around him today must conclude that whatever he buys—tires or anything else—if it be of good and sound and durable character—will make him a real saving of money as against the prices he will likely have to pay in time to come.

MANUFACTURERS PLAN TRADE BANK

Institution Will Be Used To Finance Barter With South America.

WASHINGTON, June 17.—(AP)—A group of American manufacturers, through the American Manufacturers' Export Association, are planning a $5,000,000 bank to finance barter with South American countries and to liquidate large sums of frozen credits.

The bank, formed under the Edge act, for financing foreign trade, would be used to meet the steps England and France have taken to solve the frozen credit situation and provide means for financing which large United States banks are not disposed to offer at this time. It also is designed to increase foreign trade.

A committee from the association, composed of E. V. Finch, president of the United States Alkali Manufacturers' Export Association; Fred Benke, of the General Motors Export Corporation; J. J. Doran, Parke-Davis Company; and F. T. Cole, general manager of the association, has just completed a series of conferences with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

The corporation announced today it had agreed to consider applications for loans from a bank to be formed under the Edge act.

The Edge act, a part of the federal reserve law, authorizes formation of banks to aid foreign trade.

The corporation directors announced they had adopted a resolution authorizing the corporation's sympathy "toward any movement designed to promote an increase of American exports on a sound credit basis" and that they "will give consideration, as and when presented, to applications from the proposed Edge act bank that the corporation accept bills drawn upon it arising out of transactions involving the exportation of agricultural and other products.

The resolution added that "the corporation cannot make a commitment as to the total amount of bills which it will accept as each offering will have to be considered upon its own merits and from the standpoint of the collateral and credit responsibility supporting the particular offering."

They also said that in the course of their dealings they planned, where feasible or necessary to accept South American manufactured products in payment for their goods in order to keep the flow of foreign trade going and in an effort to bring exports back to normal.

Trade with South America at present is handicapped seriously through frozen credits.

Representatives of the export association expressed the belief that by stimulated action through an Edge act bank, rather than individual action, they would have a better chance for success in their efforts to make available larger quantities of dollar exchange.

ed up in time to see a man aiming a machine gun. It was shooting red flame.

"I don't know what all happened. I ducked as bullets splintered our car. I crouched down and 'played dead.' It was the only thing that could be done."

"If the fellow had a six-shooter I could match him, but not a machine gun."

"I felt my friend Reed sag down upon me. I looked up and saw Nash had been hit. His toupee had fallen down into the car."

"Lackey began to groan. It was over quicker than you could imagine. I put my arm under Reed's head—tried to comfort Lackey."

"I noticed Lackey's revolver handle had been splintered. Maybe that was why he wasn't killed outright, like the others. Maybe the bullet ricocheted."

"I don't know where the machine guns were stationed—except the one I saw aimed at the car. It seemed to be in the hands of the man who was standing up high. Maybe on the running board of one of the cars parked in the parking lot."

Smith said he had moved the prisoner out of Hot Springs hastily by a circuitous route because he was surrounded by gangsters and the agents wanted to remove him before aid could be mustered.

"We pegged him in Hot Springs and went after him. I took Agent Lackey with me and I also called Ott Reed to help because Ott was one of the best officers I have ever seen."

"Ott went because I asked him, that's why it is awful. To think that I took Ott from his family like that."

Overcome by emotion, the agent paused.

Continuing, he said:

"We pegged Nash right in front of a pool hall and race booking joint. From a car we saw him contact a couple of other fellows. Then he pulled away from them again and we pulled up and hopped out."

"I knew he was very bald with only a fringe of hair. There was a bit of hair on his forehead. He wore a black moustache, too, and had on some nose glasses."

"Nash didn't resist. He entered our car and we tore out on the highway, taking the road to Joplin, so that we could throw off anyone who tried to follow."

Smith said he pulled Nash's hair and outfit—a toupee.

"Frank smiled at that and assured me the moustache was real."

"That's a good toupee," Nash said, "I paid $10 for that in Chicago."

Smith said the prisoner had caused no trouble.

PRESIDENT BOARDS YACHT FOR CRUISE

Roosevelt made available the funds to start a $238,000,000 naval construction program.

The narrow streets of Marion were jammed by the summer colonists and villagers as the presidential motor caravan arrived. The president went directly to the cottage of Dr. William L. McDonald, whom he visited several years ago after an attack of infantile paralysis.

After a brief visit he proceeded to the McDonald dock and in another moment he was on board, away from presidential duties and soon in the closest touch with official government. He will wear an old clothes and sweater he will wear on his two weeks' cruise up the coast.

James, his son, and George Briggs and John Cutter, of Boston, friends of the family, comprise the crew with the president.

Stephen T. Early, a secretary to the president, aboard a trailer destroyer, is his only constant official Washington and Mr. Roosevelt hopes that contact will be kept to a minimum.

The first leg of the cruise will be across Buzzards Bay to Woods Hole where the president will visit W. Cameron Forbes, former governor general of the Philippines, an old friend.

in conference quarters where the news was heard, will have to resume their private conversations regarding currency stabilization at the earliest possible moment and while keeping in the closest touch with official government delegations, renew their effort to hammer out an accord for fixing currency values at a satisfactory figure.

The French delegation, which has insisted from the beginning of the conference that stabilization of American and British exchanges must be the first step taken at London, was hopeful before the news of President Roosevelt's opposition to the tentative agreement was received, that the first stage of stabilization might soon be achieved.

The rejection of the currency scheme by the American government brought gloom to the conference which had closed its first week on a hopeful note in view of the general expectation that the dollar and the pound would soon be subjected to control operations.

A proposal for a general all-around 10 per cent reduction of tariff rates was presented to the economic commission today, when the French delegation, increasing the feeling that the conference had well begun and was on the road to real achievements.

Mr. Bonnet is expected to seek interviews with Americans tomorrow while French treasury experts and Bank of France officials have reopened negotiations with President George Harrison, of the New York Federal Reserve bank; James P. Warburg, financial adviser to the American delegation, and Oliver M. W. Sprague, executive assistant to Secretary of the Treasury Woodin.

Mr. Roosevelt's refusal caused a midnight flurry at French headquarters. Mr. Bonnet left the gay quarters of an elite supper club and called a half a dozen collaborators into an improvised conference, all in full evening dress.

Mr. Bonnet said after the conference that he had not received official notification of the American stand from Secretary of State Hull but expected a call later.

Despite the gloom, the French saw a flicker of hope in news dispatches indicating Mr. Roosevelt had not flatly refused their offer that the dollar must be stabilized.

Convict Killed; Attempt To

into the folding front seat. Hermonson and Grooms were standing on the west side of the car and toward the front. Suddenly I heard a man say 'Put em up, up, up.'

"I looked and saw a man blazing away with a machine gun from near the southwest corner of the car. He seemed to be standing on something—perhaps the running board of a car. I don't know exactly. But he was very close to us."

"I crouched under the murderous fire. I believe there were other machine guns working, too. Hermonson and Grooms fell to the pavement in front of me, their bodies riddled. The windshield of Coffey's car was splintering. The men inside of it were powerless before the red fire from the rattling guns."

"I fell to the pavement. I felt a stinging pain in my left arm. When the firing ceased—and it was all over in a flash—I leveled a pump gun at the escaping car which roared westward out of the station parking lot."

A young motorcycle patrolman, Mike Fanning, dashed from the station at the sound of the firing.

"There he is, Mike, get him," Mrs. Lottie West, a traveler's aid worker, shouted, pointing out one of the assassins she described as a big fellow weighing 200 pounds.

The officer leveled his revolver and took deliberate aim, firing three times. The huge machine gunner, Mrs. West said, fell to the ground, but joined companions on the running board of the car which dashed away.

From accounts of the ambush given by Mrs. West, Roberts Fritts, a cab driver; Charles Moore, taxicab driver, who sat in a car near by, officers believe three or possibly four men fired upon the officers from the right and left at the same time. They believe the death car was parked near that of the officers in anticipation of their appearance and that the assassins were concealed among other automobiles near by.

Four in Back Seat.
The youthful motorcycle officer said he was certain four men rode in the back sedan as the machine gunners drove away.

The sudden deadly sweep of the fire from the gun muzzles a few scant feet from the group of officers left an appalling sight for week-end travelers grouped at the station entrance where, among others, a group of six Catholic sisters witnessed the killings.

Across the plaza stood the shattered car, the glass hanging in jagged strips. On the pavement beside the car lay the bodies of Coffey, Hermonson and Grooms, the two Kansas City detectives had fallen together, on their backs, their heads riddled with machine gun bullets.

Nash was a friend of Harvey Bailey, a leader of the 11 convicts who escaped from the Kansas prison in the Memorial Day break.

He had been sought by federal officers for questioning in connection with the prison break at the federal penitentiary at Leavenworth in December, 1931, when Warden T. B. White, then in charge, was kidnapped and wounded by escaping convicts.

He was a friend of Harold Fontaine, former federal convict, convicted of smuggling firearms into the prison for the break.

T. J. Higgins, chief of detectives, expressed belief that Nash was a plot for the release of Nash probably engineered by Harvey Bailey, who may not have been present at its execution.

The chief said he doubted that Charles (Pretty Boy) Floyd, another Oklahoma killer, was involved although Floyd released a kidnapped sheriff near Lees Summit, Mo., about 20 miles from Kansas City, last night.

The sheriff, Jack Killingsworth, of Bolivar, Mo., who was with Floyd 14 hours yesterday, declared he believed that Floyd and his companion, Adam Ricchetti, who kidnapped him at Bolivar yesterday, had nothing to do with the killings.

Officers received a report that the car used by the killers had been seen driving on Mission road, a route that leads toward Oklahoma. Armored cars and police officers were sent to intercept the car.

The assassin had followed the train to Kansas City from Oklahoma last night.

The slayers were the object of probably the most intensive search this city has ever witnessed. Hundreds of police and federal authorities were scouring the city and police officers from every near-by community were guarding highways.

United States Takes Stand.
At Washington, Attorney-General Cummings issued an order setting the entire justice department on the trail of the killers and specifically assigned a detail from points near Kansas City to the case.

He also set men to checking through the names, data, finger prints and photographs in the files of the Leavenworth penitentiary.

"It is my hope," Cummings said, "that in the field of law enforcement and in the detection and prosecution of crime, I may be able to bring about a better co-ordination of state and federal activities."

It was federal agents who ended the violent career of Nash's chief, Al Spencer, when they cornered the robber and killer in the Osage hills of Oklahoma 10 years ago.

Caffrey arrested Bailey, former companion of Fred (Killer) Burke as he was playing golf on a Kansas City course a year ago. Arrested with Bailey were Thomas Holden and Francis Eckstein, train robbers escaped from Leavenworth.

Officers said today they had positive information Nash was a member of that foursome, but managed to elude the officers who arrested the other players.

Frank Smith, the agent from Oklahoma City who arrested Nash in Hot Springs, said, "I guess it just wasn't my time."

"It was a wonder," he continued, "that we weren't killed when we took Nash in Hot Springs. He had been there for some time and was surrounded by his own gang of outlaws and criminals. Our method was to work fast and get him out of the country before anyone could get hold of us."

Nash has been a notorious bandit, train robber in the Al Spencer gang and many other gangs for years. "Nash has been one of the desperate killers and bandits of the middle west. We knew that. That's why we acted cautiously. That's why, when I learned that Nash was in Hot Springs, I asked Chief Reed to go with Lackey and me."

At the mention of his friend's name Smith wept. The agent is a short, heavy-set man with 18 years of service in the bureau.

"Nash had been in Chicago since he escaped from Leavenworth," Smith said. "He told me on the way up from Arkansas that he had a good set-up in Chicago. He had a joint up there, beer and other stuff like that. He told me he had some slot machines working there, too, and was making money on them."

and thus decrease the aggregate tonnage marketed.

Plans in this direction have significance with relationship to corn as the latter is grown principally as feed for hogs. Dr. A. G. Black, acting cotton production chief, is working with Shepard in drafting plans.

Chester Davis, who is director of production responsible to George N. Peek, chief administrator, went to Chicago to confer informally with representatives of the corn and hog industry there over the week-end.

There has been some change in trade sentiment on the proposed processors' tax, some suggesting that business and industry are acquiring such momentum that a rise in the price of goods as a result of the tax might not check consumption. It is argued, too, that the addition to farm income would be reflected in purchases of cotton fabric sufficient to offset any falling off in demand as a result of increased prices.

Some believe that of the 40,000,000 acres seeded to cotton approximately 10,000,000 acres is of doubtful fertility and that southern farmers would be willing to accept a government guarantee of specific rental or benefit from the land rather than carry the risk on doubtful acreage.

The trade says that demand has disclosed an amazing shortage of goods in virtually all productive divisions. Domestic consumption during May totaled 621,000 bales compared with 332,000 in May last year and consumption for the first 10 months of current season amounted to 4,800,000 bales against 4,300,000 for the corresponding period a year ago.

New England mill districts said a good demand continues for raw cotton and that nearly all mills are starting double-shift operations. It was said in dry goods centers that cloths continued fairly active with further price advances.

Most foreign markets for American cotton have been quiet since the opening of the world economic conference. Observers are of the opinion that future demand will be gauged by the degree of success or failure of the conference.

Peek said Peek and the other departmental officials had informed southern members that $50,000,000 of the $100,000,000 provided for leasing land had been used to pay equities held by others in cotton taken over by the government at various times since the farm board began stabilization operations.

The departmental officials, Smith said, told the conference there would not be sufficient cash to pay rental on the amount of land they wanted taken out of production of cotton.

The department, Smith said, thought that at least 10,000,000 acres should be retired from production out of the approximately 38,000,000 acres total cotton area.

Smith contended that by taking the $50,000,000 and using the cotton owned by the government, which could be resold to the farmer at 6 cents a pound, 10,000,000 acres could be retired. The $50,000,000 fund would be used to give the farmer a rental payment equal to the expense to which he had been put up to the time the acreage was abandoned.

"Everybody knows that the farmer is going to put this processing tax," Smith said. "The farmer has no control over the price."

WALLACE REVEALS PLAN TO AID TOBACCO GROWERS
WASHINGTON, June 17.—(AP)—Secretary Wallace announced today that tobacco growers of New England, Pennsylvania, Ohio and Wisconsin would receive payments for reduction in acreage of the 1933 crop.

He said also that payment in an increased amount was being considered for those growers who agree to divert to non-commercial uses specified quantities of tobacco on hand from previous crops for each acre retired from production.

Wallace, in approving the plans submitted by the agricultural adjustment administration, said, "The tobacco to be offered covered filler and binder types, with growers agreeing that they would not harvest in 1933 more than 50 per cent of the acreage harvested in 1932, or more than 40 per cent of the annual average acreage harvested in 1931 and 1932."

MYSTERY VICTIMS OF KILLER SOUGHT

Skeptical Officials Push
Hunt for Graves in 4-
Year-Old Slayings.

HAMMOND, Ind., June 17.—(AP)—Behind a barricade of rope erected to keep out the morbidly curious, workmen dug on a hillside tonight for the bodies of a man and woman whom a 25-year-old reformatory inmate said he killed four years ago.

Smiling and courteous, the self-styled killer, Woodrow Wilson Cochran, directed the workmen in their gruesome search. Even though officials and the public were openly skeptical of Cochran's story, a crowd that sometimes reached several hundred watched the digging.

Often they strained at the rope barrier as a workman's pick struck a buried stick or stone. They reached the scene by walking through an abandoned cemetery.

"I confessed the killings because it bothered my conscience," said Cochran, dressed in blue denim uniform of the state reformatory at Pendleton. He is serving a term on sentence of a charge of rape.

"I was hitch-hiking four years ago to my home at Lawrenceville, Ill.," he recounted, "when a man about 28 years old and a girl about 20 gave me a ride. I killed him with an iron pipe and took $36 from his pockets."

"The woman was very frightened. I drove her near the cemetery there (pointing at the abandoned Concordia graveyard 75 yards away) and killed her. Then I took the bodies near that ditch (again pointing) and buried them."

Cochran related the killings several times without changing the facts. Then he calmly re-enacted the slayings, riding in an automobile with Deputy Sheriff Carroll Holley and others.

Partial confirmation of his story came today from E. A. Woods, 24-year-old owner at Elford, Ill., near here. Woods said a car, of the model described by Cochran and without license plates, was towed to his garage on April 6, 1929, after Cochran had left it without gasoline on a highway. Woods said Cochran called for the car on the following day.

Authorities said their main reason for not believing Cochran's story was that they had no reports of persons missing at the time of the alleged killings. They said, however, the victims might have been motorists from another part of the country.

Cochran was kept almost constantly at the scene of the digging, being taken to the city jail only for food and rest. He was not manacled, but deputy sheriffs with pistols kept close watch over him.

Over Seas

By SYMON DARTON,
Associated Press Cable Editor.

Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald stirred up a fine hornet's nest when he mentioned the war debts in the opening session of the world economic conference. Straightway the world statesmen were in the midst of their first crisis. There even was talk—jocular, to be sure, but still talk—of the Americans catching a ship home.

Consider the events leading up to the conference and this seems strange. For there was no reason why anyone should have been surprised at the introduction of the debt question, despite the fact that it was officially forbidden. Take a homely parallel:

It used to be the style in the United States for politicians to assert, before each national political convention, that the subject of prohibition was not to be an issue, that it cut across both parties and was outside the realm of politics. Yet each convention saw a lively prohibition fight.

Approximately the same thing happened in regard to the debts when politicians from all over the world gathered at London.

Mr. MacDonald, introducer of the subject forbidden, can point to precedent for his debt declaration, for virtually the same thing was said by the very experts who drew up the program for the world economic conference. And there were two Americans on that committee of experts.

Mr. MacDonald, referring to the debts as a subject "in the front rank of importance," remarked that "it cannot be dealt with here because obviously this conference is not constituted in such a way as to enable it to consider and settle the matter." He went on: "Lausanne has to be completed and this vexed question settled once for all in the light of present world conditions."

The prime minister virtually repeated what the preparatory commission of experts had said (in a report, incidentally, which was reprinted by the United States department of commerce). The experts held this:

"In the movement towards economic reconciliation, the armistice was signed at Lausanne; the London conference must draft the treaty of peace." At Lausanne German reparations were reduced approximately 90 per cent on the condition that the United States would be similarly lenient with the recipients of these reparations who owed us war debts.

"The progress of reconstruction which we deem it necessary for governments to undertake it set out below," the experts said. "In this program, the problem of intergovernmental indebtedness has not been included, because it lies outside our terms of reference. In our opinion, however, it is essential that this question be settled and that the settlement shall relieve the world of further anxiety concerning the disturbing effects of such payments upon financial, economic and currency stability. Until there is such a settlement, or the definite prospect of such a settlement, these debts will remain an insuperable barrier to economic and financial reconstruction. We therefore attach the greatest importance to the early resumption and successful conclusion of negotiations upon this problem."

Roundabout, the experts charged with the preparation of the program of the conference brought in the debts. Roundabout, Mr. MacDonald did the same, admitting that the conference itself could do nothing.

So much for the background of the controversy which rocked the conference in the early part of its first week. At this writing the fought-about question is currency stabilization. Can it be effected? The answer will tell whether the conference will be a success or a failure. For there is no doubt that agreements expressed in general terms concerning tariff walls and quotas will mean nothing at all unless each nation may feel secure in the knowledge that no other nation will be able to beat down protective trade barriers by the expedient of making a pound the equivalent of 10 shillings or the dollar the equivalent of 30 cents.

It is still too early to predict what the London gathering will do. But the Americans are not the only participants who interpret the start optimistically.

U.S. TELLS FRANCE TO PAY DEBT DUE, THEN ASK SLASH

Note Is Blunt and Calls Attention to Default of December; Finland Is Praised for Payment.

WASHINGTON, June 17.—(AP)—In a formal note, the United States today ignored France's appeal for a review of its war debt and forcefully reminded Paris government of its two unpaid debt installments totaling $60,000,000.

At the same time, a note was handed to Italian Ambassador Rosso saying while his government's payment of $1,000,000 on a total installment due of more than $14,000,000 might be considered by congress and the American people as "unsatisfactory," Mr. Roosevelt was willing to enter upon a discussion of the Italian debt.

Meanwhile, it was made clear, informally, that while President Roosevelt would not brusquely wave aside further French representations on the debt question, that nation must place itself on the same footing with others that have met or partially met their obligations on the debt question could be reopened.

Praise for Finland. Notes identical to the one to France were dispatched to Poland and Belgium, which, like France, have now defaulted on two installments. The notes were in reply to communications from those governments saying they were not able to meet the payments which fell due Thursday and repeating their urgent request for revision.

Receiving a partial payment from Great Britain, Mr. Roosevelt said he did not consider the unpaid remainder as default and consented to discuss the question of revising the British debt agreement. The same privilege is being accorded to other debtor nations which are making an effort to meet their obligations in part at least.

Highly appreciative of Finland's full payment of the installment due Thursday, the administration told that government in a note that it was "ready to discuss at the pleasure" of the Finnish government the entire debt question.

"The government of Finland, by this action, has justified the high regard with which it has always been held by the government of the United States," the note said. "It is hoped that the payment of Finland will have regard to this payment as an important national obligation and have discharged its terms in full."

Must Pay Before Talk. Repeated French request for revision, Mr. Roosevelt had held prior to the second default of this week that the Paris government must pay in full the sum of $80,000,000 which was allowed to lapse last December before he would consent to a study of its debt.

It was emphasized today that the president still holds that view and in addition is veering toward a second condition that a partial payment be made at least on the $40,000,000 installment that fell due Thursday.

Acting Secretary Phelan is to confer early next week with Assistant Secretary Moley regarding possible dates for these conversations. Then the diplomats of the various countries involved will be notified of the terms.

The earliest beginning of such discussion was authoritatively fixed today for late July. Thus, they would have 15 instants of the debt question to discuss before the London conference, which in its early days the debt question threatened to wreck.

Here is the warm letter of acknowledgment sent by this government to Finland:

June 17, 1933.
Minister of Finance.
Helsinki.
The president directs me to acknowledge the receipt of the payment by your government of the $1,000,000 installment of the debt owed to the United States government. The government of Finland, by this action, has justified the high regard with which it has always been held by the government of the United States. It is significant that the people of Finland have regarded this payment as an important national obligation and have discharged its terms in full. This government will be ready to discuss at the pleasure of the government of Finland the entire debt question.

Accept, sir, the renewed assurances of my highest consideration.
WILLIAM PHILLIPS,
Acting Secretary of State.

The only question which Finland had raised about its debt had been one of the technicalities in paying in silver.

The text of the French debt note informing the United States that it would not pay its June 15 installment was received today.

King, Queen Entertain Economic Delegates

WINDSOR, England, June 17.—(AP)—An event without parallel in social history took place here this afternoon when King George and Queen Mary were hosts at a garden party for the delegates to the world economic conference.

Two thousand guests, representing virtually the whole civilized world, were entertained by their majesties in the spacious grounds of ancient Windsor castle.

It was a brilliant scene on the sloping green lawn as the guests mingled and talked in a babel of tongues against the background of the garden and the historic great castle walls.

NAVY TO SEARCH FOR LOST FLYER

Admiral Pratt Orders All Vessels in Alaskan Waters To Hunt Mattern.

WASHINGTON, June 17.—(AP)—Admiral William V. Pratt, chief of naval operations, tonight ordered all naval vessels and airplanes in Alaskan waters and in the vicinity of the Aleutian waters to search for Jimmy Mattern, round-world flyer missing on a hop from Siberia to Alaska.

The navy department said the repair ship Argonne, in command of Captain Harry Dact, was in Alaskan waters and that at least two navy flyers also were in the vicinity. They were Ensign William A. Moffett Jr., son of the late Rear Admiral Moffett, and Lieutenant John Vest.

Pratt's order instructed all naval vessels and pilots to make every effort, by sea and plane, to locate the missing airman.

FLYER STILL MISSING ON FLIGHT TO ALASKA. NOME, Alaska, June 17.—(AP)—Jimmy Mattern, Texas aviator, who left New York two weeks ago on a solo globe-circling flight, was still missing today, somewhere between Khabarovsk, Siberia, and Nome, his destination when he left the Siberian town at 2:30 p. m. Wednesday, eastern standard time.

Failing to receive word of Mattern, in the opinion of Alaska airmen, is not necessarily alarming, as he might have set his ship down on some island or some portion of the Alaskan coast where communication is difficult. It is a 2,500-mile flight from Khabarovsk to Nome. It was raining here today, some fog was reported at Dutch Harbor in the Aleutians and snowfall at Point Barrow.

While coast guard officers in Seattle reported they had received no request to institute a search for Mattern, which would be difficult in view of the immense amount of territory to be covered, they added the commander of the Bering sea patrol was undoubtedly aware of the situation and keeping an eye out for the aviator.

Mattern is no novice in Alaska aviation. At two years ago he piloted a refueling ship in the far north for the Robbins Seattle-Tokyo flight attempt.

Police Thwart Plot To Kidnap Austrian

VIENNA, June 17.—(AP)—A wave of terror which has been sweeping Austria the past week hit parents of a Jewish boy today when it was revealed that police had thwarted an attempt to kidnap the son of a Jewish hat manufacturer.

One kidnaper was shot and killed and three others were arrested when they were surrounded as they waited outside the school for their victim. They had chloroform, rope and gag ready in an automobile.

Police said all four were identified as communists "who apparently had political as well as financial motives." Authorities have attributed a series of bombings and other disorders recently to "the brown terror," apparently meaning nazis.

HITLER GOMBOES DISCUSS THRONE HOPES OF OTTO

Restoration of Hungarian Monarchy in Balance; Austrian Premier Flies Home From London.

By TOM WILHELM.

BERLIN, June 17.—(AP)—Archduke Otto of Hapsburg's chances of ascending the Austro-Hungarian twin throne of his forefathers were subjected today to the crucible of mid-European politics in a meeting between Chancellor Hitler, of Germany, and Premier Gombos, of Hungary, but the result was unannounced.

The nazi party's foreign political department issued a communique on the meeting which said: "General economic and political questions were discussed... the meeting closed with hearty assurances that each state viewed the other with greatest sympathy."

The Hungarian premier was feted by Dr. Alfred Rosenberg, head of the foreign division of the nazi party, and foreign associates including Theodore Habicht, former German adviser to the Austrian nazi party who returned here after being jailed for a day early this week in connection with raids on Nazis in Vienna.

Later Gombos attended a reichswehr (army) concert as guest of Chancellor Hitler.

Almost simultaneously Chancellor Dollfuss of Austria, alighted in a plane at Vienna from London and was greeted by the British and French ministers.

Whether this diplomatic gesture was calculated to indicate to opponents of Dollfuss how Great Britain and France viewed the mid-European situation could not be ascertained, but it may be observed in the light of renewed efforts to secure Otto's place on the throne and to offset the spread of fascism.

Gombos arrived here in Chancellor Hitler's private airplane. In a recent interview, the Magyar premier flatly refused to concede Otto any chance of coming to the throne, regardless of the decision made today. The picture-postcard dealers rose to the occasion when Braunau's hometown boy made good. They revised some of the standard views of the old town (it has two interesting 15th century churches) so as to show a swastika sun rising from behind clouds on the horizon.

The town fathers, however, were by no means in such a hurry. Belonging largely to political parties opposed to the nazis, they strenuously resisted efforts of the local Hitlerites to have their illustrious fellow-townsmen elected honorary citizen of Braunau.

So Adolf Hitler was still "that foreigner" to the majority of his hometown's aldermen when his birthday was celebrated in Germany. In retaliation the Braunau nazis saw to it that the town was befogged literally with swastikas.

BRAUNAU-AM-INN, Austria, June 17.—(AP)—The man who spanked Adolf Hitler, the house in which Germany's chancellor was born, the beer produced here and "the iron horse on the roof" combine to explain why this town on the Austro-German border is enjoying a lively tourist traffic.

Only the River Inn separates the country Hitler rules from the town where he was born. Consequently a pilgrimage to his birthplace is just an afternoon's walk for many citizens of the reich. For millions of others it is an easy jaunt by rail or motor. The picture-postcard dealers rose to the occasion when Braunau's hometown boy made good. ## COLONY DEMANDS HIT BY MEMBERS OF GERMAN GROUP

Berlin Delegation Declares Minister's Declaration Does Not Conform With Official Views

LONDON, June 17.—(AP)—The demand submitted to the world economic conference by Dr. Alfred Hugenberg, German minister of economics and agriculture, for restoration of Germany's colonial empire was merely an expression of Dr. Hugenberg's personal opinion, the Berlin delegation said today.

Hendryk Colijn, of Holland, president of the economic commission, was told by the Germans that the Hugenberg memorandum did not conform with the viewpoint of the official delegation.

It was learned that Dr. Hugenberg, who has been sharply at odds with leaders of the nazi party, was leaving tonight for Berlin.

The Hugenberg memorandum suggested that there were two ways to increase Germany's capacity to pay her foreign obligations. He asked that Germany be given an African empire where a large public works project could be executed, or that new territories be opened to the Germans "who have not enough space in which to live."

One of Dolly Sisters Undergoes Operation

PARIS, June 17.—(AP)—An operation, believed to have been successful, was performed today on Jenny Dolly, of the Dolly sisters' dancing team, who was injured March 2 in an automobile smash-up.

Replacement of the stomach in its normal position was the purpose of the operation.

Plastic surgery, which had been proposed to overcome injuries to Miss Dolly's face as a result of the accident, will be postponed until her recovery from today's operation, which lasted an hour and a quarter.

Thirty-one Americans were presented at the first four courts, held May 11, 12, 17 and 18.

Those to be introduced at the function next Friday include:

Mrs. Paul Hays, of Staunton, Va.; Miss Carol Hulse, of Baltimore; Miss Margaret McReynolds, of Chattanooga, Tenn.; Miss Eleanor Converse Preston and Miss Helen Robbins, of Washington, D. C.

Labrador Ice Jams Delay Italian Fliers

ORBITELLO, Italy, June 17.—(AP) Aviation Minister General Italo Balbo announced tonight that ice jams off Labrador will prevent the departure until at least the middle of next week of the Italian seaplane squadron he will lead on a flight by stages to Chicago.

He said the supply ship Alice which left St. John's, Newfoundland, June 5 for Cartwright, Labrador, where the squadron is to alight after a flight from Iceland, has been trying fruitlessly for nine days to cross Belle Isle straits, which is choked with ice.

Goering's Sternness Traced To Bitterness at Wife's Death

BERLIN, June 17.—(NANA)—In Sweden there is a house where each visitor is requested to record in the guest-book not only his name but also his favorite vice. Among those who have perpetrated their weaknesses is Hermann Goering, prime minister of Prussia and Chancellor Hitler's right-hand man, who in a witty play on words declares his besetting sin to be a love of pomp. Instead of "trunksucht" a mania for drink, he has written "prunksucht," a mania for splendor.

Not had, this self-characterization, for all who have visited the much-talked-of Prussian premier are unanimous that this love of pomp shows itself the moment one enters the reception room of his home. Everything is massive, full of color. The very portraits impress themselves on the room by means of their forcefulness and masculinity. There is a bust of Mussolini; there is that well-known picture representing Napoleon as first consul; there is Frederick the Great by Menzel.

Another room in Goering's home takes deep hold of a visitor, so utterly different from the monumental reception room. Water colors, plants and flowers cover the walls in a long row and the furniture corresponds with these delicate tints. Everything speaks a woman's touch and you are carried back to the period when this strongly masculine, uncompromising revolutionary was completed by the comrade whose early death deprived him all too soon of the soft feminine element so necessary to the rounding out of his character.

Who was Goering before he met Karin von Fock, the beautiful young erstwhile pleasant Prussian into a much-dreaded man of silence.

Southerners in France Plan To Mark Sea Battle Monday

By MARY KNIGHT.
PARIS, June 17.—(UP)—Southerners throughout France and in Paris particularly, are preparing to observe on Monday, June 19, the 60th anniversary of the battle of the Alabama.

Captain Semmes, in charge of the Confederate corsair, brought the Alabama into the harbor at Cherbourg on June 11, 1864, after two years of continuous cruising, with the hope that the French authorities would permit him to overhaul his vessel. Captain Semmes had been enjoined by the Confederate government to keep the destination of his boat a secret and to carefully avoid any infringement of law which would give the British government a pretext for seizing her.

A few days after the Alabama came into port at Cherbourg, the United States steamer Kearsage, commanded by Captain Winslow, arrived at the same destination and proceeded to make a demonstration which the officers of the Alabama considered and accepted as a challenge.

It was on Sunday, June 10, that the fight took place in the roads just out of Cherbourg. News of the battle spread like wildfire and special trains from Paris proceeded to the scene of the conflict crowded with curious onlookers. Journalists, naval and military officers.

CATHOLICS IN ANNUAL PILGRIMAGE TO WASHINGTON, GA., TODAY

SENATOR RUSSELL AND HUGH HOWELL TO ADDRESS PRESS

Georgia Newspaper Men Gather in Rome for Annual Convention on June 21 to 24.

ROME, Ga., June 18.—(AP)—United States Senator Richard B. Russell Jr. and Hugh Howell, chairman of the state democratic executive committee, are among the numerous speakers to address members of the Georgia Press Association here in annual convention on June 21 to 24.

Senator Russell is on the program for discussion of "The New Deal," while Mr. Howell has "The High Cost of Government" for his subject.

Jack Williams, editor of the Waycross Journal-Herald, is president of the Georgia Press Association; Milton Hestwood, of the Tribune News, Cartersville, is vice president, and Hal M. Stanley, head of the state department of industrial relations, is secretary.

These men have worked out a program, with the aid of others, dealing with many of the problems of the weekly and daily newspapers in Georgia.

Several newspapermen, headed by John Paschall, managing editor of the Atlanta Journal, and W. G. Sullivan, managing editor of the Savannah Press, are to speak on the opening night, June 21. Assistant Attorney General D. M. Parker, Brown Tyler, of Hapeville, editor of the Fulton Weekly Review; A. G. Maxwell, vice president of the Citizens and Southern National Bank, Atlanta, and L. L. Sizer, of Atlanta, are also on the program.

Other speakers include Judge Ogden Persons, of Forsyth, and Lee Moore, editor of the Clayton County News at Jonesboro.

On Thursday, June 22, the editors will be guests of Cartersville at a barbecue and will visit the home of Mrs. Corra Harris, well-known Georgian author, near-by. The Friday program calls for a visit to Cloudland, Ga., and on Saturday a business session will be held and a meeting place for the next year will be selected.

The convention sessions in Rome will be held at Shorter College.

ANNUAL SONG SERVICE HONORS JUDSON MOORE

WINDER, Ga., June 17.—The annual memorial song service held each year at Winder on the third Sunday afternoon in June in honor of Professor Judson L. Moore, of Bethlehem, will be held this year at the Winder school auditorium, beginning at 2 o'clock. Outstanding singers from all sections of the state are expected to be present. The committee in charge of arrangements includes A. T. Harrison, chairman; R. D. Wall, W. M. Holsenbeck, J. L. Whitley and H. E. Haynie.

These memorial services in honor of Professor Moore were originated about 15 years ago at the suggestion of Judge L. C. Russell, now of Atlanta, and have been held each year since.

Professor Moore has spent his life in teaching singing and leading the singing in revivals in many sections of Georgia and other southern states, and has written and set to music a number of religious songs. Wherever singing conventions are held he is popular.

'Forgotten Town' in South Georgia Is Selected for Forestry Camp Site

ALBANY, Ga., June 17.—(AP)—The "forgotten town" as well as the "forgotten man" will be remembered by President Roosevelt's administration, if the selection of Cotton Hill, in the northeastern part of Clay county, as the prospective site of a civilian conservation corps camp can be taken as an indication.

The tract selected for the camp, it is reported from Fort Gaines, comprises about 60,000 acres in Clay, Quitman and Randolph counties. The Cotton Hill section is well drained, on a high, sandy ridge. The town of that name, now long abandoned, was once incorporated, and boasted a college, bank, churches and other public institutions. ## PRUITT NOT GUILTY OF DYNAMITE PLOT Jury Quickly Clears Savannah Man of Attempt To Bomb City Hall.

SAVANNAH, Ga., June 17.—(AP)—T. V. Pruitt has been found "not guilty" of a charge of attempting to dynamite the city hall here.

A superior court jury yesterday returned the verdict after deliberating but six minutes.

"You played the fool," Judge Mel-drim told Pruitt in releasing him. "Don't do it any more. My sympathy goes out to you and your family. Go and be straight."

Pruitt was arrested several weeks ago after he said he snatched a burning fuse from several sticks of dynamite in the city hall near the office of Mayor Thomas Gamble. He denied any connection with the dynamite, but later was brought to trial.

He entered the city hall in search of work, he said at the time the dynamite was found.

Pruitt read a statement before the court in which he recounted his efforts to find work. He told of going to the city hall, where he saw a bag lying in the corner.

"That was the first time I ever saw the bag," he said. "After seeing that it appeared to be a bomb of some kind I became excited and hollered 'fire' to attract attention."

"I was highly nervous I did not in fact see any fire; the fuse was lying by the bag, not connected to the dynamite. The dynamite was inclosed in the paper bag."

"After the alarm was made within a few minutes all rushed up. I then saw that it was a good chance for me to make the outcry and let it appear that I had saved the life of our mayor and other officials of the city hall and in doing that I would be a hero and the mayor would order that I be put to work on the streets."

"I was tired, hungry and looking for work. My family was in destitute condition. My rent was unpaid. The first thing that appeared in my mind after seeing this package and finding out it was dynamite was to make this outcry and I would be given work. I did not take the dynamite to the city hall."

200 MELON CARS SHIPPED IN WEEK

Five S. Georgia Counties Richer by $20,000 as Prices Rise.

MOULTRIE, Ga., June 17.—More than $20,000 was paid for approximately 200 cars of watermelons, which were shipped from Colquitt, Thomas, Lowndes, Tift and Brooks counties this week. This is the heaviest movement prior to June 20 in many years, well informed melon men declare. This does not mean a large crop, however, it was pointed out. The acreage is only about half that normally given to the crop and the dry weather has further curtailed production.

Buyers in large numbers are already flocking into this section. More are now in Moultrie than have ever been here before. The state and federal government's crop reporting service will open an office Monday and from here will disseminate news concerning the watermelon market, the weather and the movement. The office will be in charge of J. A. Peterson.

Melons shipped this week were grown in areas which have received local rains. They were chiefly Dixie Belles and Cuban Queens. The Tom Watsons, the most popular brand, will not be ripe before next week.

Growers are jubilant over the prices they are receiving. The short crop is expected to hold the market strong and the shippers believe they will make a profit this year, the first time since 1929.

TAX ON BANK CHECKS RAPED BY O'KELLEY

APPLING, Ga., June 17.—Hoke O'Kelley, candidate for congress from the tenth district, spoke here Friday night before the courthouse. He said "the United States government should remove the tax on bank checks. This tax was most unfortunate and no doubt went a long way toward making more acute the money shortage which we experienced during the first part of this year. To save themselves the payment of this tax, many depositors withdrew their money from banks and carried it in their pockets instead of leaving it in the banks and drawing checks against it. A dollar left in the bank and drawn against by checks can be used more actively than cash. Bank deposits are in fact bank credits and can be drawn against several times as fast as it can be handled. Payment by checks expedites business and stimulates trade in all lines. It offers the most convenient form of payment, and makes every dollar capable of doing work several times as fast as it can be physically passed from hand to hand."

WRENS FLOUR MILL SUPPLIES 30 COUNTIES

WRENS, Ga., June 17.—The modern flour mill which is owned and operated by the Wrens Community Center is doing its bit towards furnishing bread for 30 or more counties in Georgia and South Carolina. Since the new crop of wheat has been harvested the management has been forced to run 24 hours each day in order to grind the custom wheat that comes to the mill from all points of the compass. Freight trains, trucks, wagons and barges all co-operate in keeping several hundred bushels of wheat on the mill floors.

Owing to the fact that the new wheat is not thoroughly dry it is tough and hence the mill is not able to turn out flour to its full capacity when the wheat is dry. A day's run nets a little over 100 barrels of finished flour. This, of course, does not include the shorts and other by-products.

At the present time wheat is now coming here from a territory with a radius of 100 miles. A great deal of wheat is brought here from territory around Dublin and Milledgeville. The long-distance hauling is being done on trucks and trains. One truck came in today with 190 bushels of wheat. This included the grists of a number of farmers in a community more than 75 miles from Wrens.

Nickel Steel Used In Reo Self-Shifter

Formal public announcement of Reo's new self-shifter is said to have been preceded by more than two years of gruelling road tests covering millions of miles over highways crossing nearly every state in the Union. The intention of Reo engineers was to make certain beyond all doubt that their pioneering invention was as near perfect as it possibly could be any part of a motor vehicle.

Before the road tests were started, however, according to H. T. Thomas, vice president and chief engineer of the company, Reo designers, metallurgists and research engineers drew on their experience in building both silent-second passenger car and heavy duty truck transmissions. Then they conducted laboratory tests to prove the suitability of the alloy steels they had selected for the gears of the new transmission.

"It was necessary," Mr. Thomas says, "that the gear teeth have great strength to insure against breakage, and that they have extremely hard surfaces to resist wear and continue to operate quietly during long periods of service; that is, live up to Reo's long-life traditions. In the interest of securing a compact design combining strength, simplicity and wear resistance, it was desirable to have the straight rollers of the accurately fitted roller bearings of the silent intermediate gear roll directly on ground surfaces of the gear itself, rather than against separate ball races. Thus the gears were required to have the extreme hardness characteristic of the highest grade heavy duty roller bearings."

"The steel selected was a nickel-molybdenum alloy, electric-furnace steel. After the forged steel blanks have been machined and the teeth accurately cut the green gears are carburized to convert the surface to a depth of about 1-32 inch into high carbon steel, like tool steel. After the heat treatments, which leave the surface harder than glass and the metal behind the hard shell or case tough and strong, the surface against which the rollers operate are ground to tolerances of 1-100,000th of an inch, or about 1-20 of the thickness of a cigarette paper. It is of interest, Reo engineers point out, that the costly nickel-molybdenum alloy steel, the method of heat treatment and the care taken in grinding are almost identical with the practice followed in making the cones and cups of the tapered roller bearings used in front and rear wheels and differentials of Reo passenger cars and speed wagons, parts of which so well withstand heavy loads, severe shocks and constant hammering over irregular pavements."

"The first news of expansion in the automotive industry that has come out of Detroit in more than a year was announced today by Byron C. Foy, president of the DeSoto Motor Corporation.

Mr. Foy's statement announced the removal of all the manufacturing operations of the DeSoto Motor Corporation from the corporation's plant at Lynch road and Mt. Elliott avenue in Detroit, which DeSoto has shared with Plymouth, to larger quarters in the corporation's plant located on East Jefferson avenue in this city.

First Expansion Announced For DeSoto Motors

The first news of expansion in the automotive industry that has come out of Detroit in more than a year was announced today by Byron C. Foy, president of the DeSoto Motor Corporation.

Mr. Foy's statement announced the removal of all the manufacturing operations of the DeSoto Motor Corporation from the corporation's plant at Lynch road and Mt. Elliott avenue in Detroit, which DeSoto has shared with Plymouth, to larger quarters in the corporation's plant located on East Jefferson avenue in this city.

This move was made necessary by increased sales that have taxed plant capacities to such an extent that enlarged facilities were made immediately necessary. Sales of DeSoto cars and trucks during the week ending June 3 showed a 22.3 per cent increase over the previous week, and retail sales of DeSoto cars by dealers during May were 38.2 per cent greater than the previous month.

Changes are being made in the Jefferson avenue plant which, when completed, will give DeSoto what is declared to be the industry's most modern equipment for car manufacturing.

The increased facilities will also enable DeSoto to fill special equipment orders on a volume scale not heretofore possible.

In addition, DeSoto production will be facilitated by reason of the fact that DeSoto bodies are manufactured in the corporation's body plant immediately adjacent to the new location on East Jefferson avenue.

The executive offices of the DeSoto Motor Corporation will remain in the Lynch road and Mt. Elliott plant until new and modern quarters are completed at the East Jefferson avenue location.

The housing of all DeSoto manufacturing operations in the new location on East Jefferson avenue will permit the Plymouth car to utilize the entire facilities of the plant at Lynch road and Mt. Elliott, formerly shared by DeSoto and Plymouth, and plans are being completed which will enable Plymouth to make all production records in its history last month with a total of more than 34,000 cars, to further increase its present production facilities.

Combined sales of DeSoto and Plymouth cars by DeSoto dealers have shown steady increase for the past eight weeks, and for the week ending June 3, DeSoto dealers reported the greatest volume of sales in their history.

The increased production facilities provided will be required immediately to provide the volume of cars being ordered by DeSoto dealers for immediate shipment.

Pontiac Production Highest Since May Nineteen Thirty-One

Pontiac production during June will exceed that of any month since May, 1931.

With the month only a few days old, sustained buying demand necessitated an increase in the factory schedule of 20 per cent over original estimates to the new two-year high.

"At a time when car sales should be dropping from the normal spring peak, Pontiac's last six 10-day sales periods all registered progressive increases over each preceding period," said R. K. White, sales manager.

"With but one exception, these periods all were much larger than the corresponding periods of 1932. Pontiac sales total for May exceeded production by several hundred units and was 76 per cent greater than sales in May of last year."

First Five Months for Dodge Larger Than Entire Year 'Thirty-Two'

Front row and spotlight in the 1933 Automobile Business Show are claimed by Dodge Brothers Corporation, whose plants dispatched more Dodge six and eight-cylinder passenger cars in the first five months of the present year than were shipped during the entire year 1932.

In giving out this information, A. vanDerZee, general sales manager of Dodge, also points out that while the company's total passenger car shipments for January, February, March, April, May, amounting to 27,362 cars, exceed Dodge passenger car shipments for the 12 months of 1932, the figure does not take into account Dodge trucks and Plymouth Sixes also shipped to Dodge dealers within the first five months of the present year.

Mr. vanDerZee also mentions the fact that although the week ending June 3 included a national holiday, the week's record of Dodge dealers' retail deliveries of passenger cars and trucks shows an increase of 1.2 per cent over deliveries of the preceding week.

A tabulation of Dodge dealers' over-all retail deliveries—meaning deliveries of Dodge Sixes and Eights, Dodge trucks and Plymouth Sixes—reveals an increase of 41.7 per cent over deliveries in the corresponding 22 weeks of 1932. Deliveries of Dodge

Plymouth Plant Set to Build Forty Thousand Cars a Month

Further expansion plans of the Plymouth Motor Corporation which will enable the company to produce a record number of cars were revealed Saturday.

Production facilities completed at the 40-acre Detroit Plymouth plant will now permit the manufacture of more than 40,000 cars per month, and new projects at the plant are now under way to facilitate the handling of additional new automobiles.

This was revealed Saturday by R. E. Hutchinson, chairman of the board of the Plymouth Motor Corporation, at the ground-breaking for the automobile industry's most modern driveway and "truckway" delivery grounds, to be located opposite the Plymouth plant, north of Lynch road, Detroit.

These new facilities will be completed on a part of the Chrysler Corporation's 60-acre tract. A series of concrete runways will enable 2,500 cars to be handled with military precision. A new one-story building to house distribution executives will also be built on the grounds, it was announced.

It was stated Saturday that increased Plymouth sales, which have taxed the

Tire Makers Returning To Akron Plants

AKRON, Ohio, June 17.—Some 10,000 unemployed tire builders have been put back to work here since April 1; and for the first time since 1929 the rubber factories are working 24 hours a day, six and even seven days a week, to fill a demand.

For the most part the men being hired in are former employees, as being skilled men, who can quickly get back into the full swing of production. To date the men laid off in 1932 and most of those in 1931 have been put back to work and the employment offices are now calling those laid off still earlier.

As indicating how the economic cycle moves, resumption of hiring by the rubber shops has already been reflected in increased buying at the stores downtown, increased activities at the theaters, garages, real estate offices and so on. The pay roll money is being put into circulation and the tire capital of America is presenting a more cheerful appearance than has existed in four years.

At the Goodyear plant, largest of the rubber companies, where 2,500 men have been taken back, R. S. Wilson, vice president and sales manager, stated that its business had doubled since February. He expressed concern over a shortage of stock.

"The tire industry is still in an excited season," he said. "Tires are longer in winter driving than in summer. However, the increased buying we are now experiencing goes far beyond that. Perhaps the government's policy of continued expansion has something to do with the situation. Many people have been driving their cars till the tires are dangerously thin. Realizing that they will have to buy new ones presently, they are apparently concluding that they had better do so at once, since prices presumably will never be any lower than now."

One price increase, of about 5 per cent, went into effect a month ago.

"We do know," Mr. Wilson continued in a recent statement, "that our dealers are not merely buying for stock. It is the car owners of the country who are responsible for this remarkable increase in buying. The tires are going into service on automobiles, buses and trucks."

Despite the heavy demands on the factory, Goodyear is still on a six-hour-day basis, running four shifts a day. "As long as unemployment in the nation continues to the extent that it is, public interest demands that the work in hand be spread among as many persons as possible," he stated.

"When we were forced to start laying men off in 1929 the factory gave the matter careful thought, selecting the layoffs so as to keep the best men, those of long service and those where the family situation warranted. Single men went out ahead of married ones, and men with families were preferred over those who had none. The depression compelled the manufacturer to give solid thought to the social aspects of business."

"As hiring commenced we took men back in reverse order. The last man to go was the first to be hired back. He presumably was the most efficient, the most in need of work."

CHES. SMITH JR.

Mr. Smith has just been notified by J. M. Wilson, zone manager for B. O. P., with headquarters in Atlanta, of his appointment to the office as zone manager for B. O. P. at Birmingham, Ala.

Mr. Smith has covered the Atlanta dealer zone for the past year and this promotion was gained through his untiring efforts to work with and for his dealers. He leaves with the well wishes of the entire dealer and zone people here who predict even further success for him.

Chrysler Sales Show Big Gains Over 'Thirty Two'

The week ending May 27 saw the largest number of retail deliveries made by Chrysler dealers since August, 1931, according to figures released by J. W. Frazer, general sales manager of the Chrysler Sales Corporation.

Chrysler dealers in this week delivered more Plymouth cars than ever before in their history.

Sales for the week of May 27 were 2 per cent greater than for the preceding week and 31 per cent greater than for the corresponding week of 1932. Retail deliveries of Chrysler and Plymouth cars by Chrysler dealers from January 1 to date are 11 per cent ahead of those for the same period of 1932. This is the seventh consecutive week in which Chrysler dealers have reported a gain in sales.

Parade of Old Cars Opens World Fair

When General Motors Corporation dedicated its building at a Century of Progress, Chicago, a feature of the ceremonies was a parade of old cars made in the early days of the passenger car divisions.

Buick was represented by two of the earliest cars shown, one made in 1905 and the other in 1909.

The 1905 Buick, powered with two cylinders, represented in its day the ability of the Buick organization to design and produce an automobile that represented the highest development of the motor vehicle. At the ceremonies for the dedication it was driven by Henry Hopf, one of the oldest continuous owners of Buicks in the country.

At the dedication ceremonies in Chicago, the 1909 Buick, equipped with four cylinders, and other advances made in four years, was piloted by F. A. Bower, Buick's chief engineer, who had assisted in the design of the car of that year. He had as his passenger R. H. Grant, a vice president of General Motors.

Side by side with its elder brothers was a shining example of the 1933 Buick line, with W. F. Hufstader, Buick sales manager, at its wheel. The car was striking in its visualization of the progress made in car-building in the last quarter of a century by Buick Motor Company.

A new plant of 1905 design, mounted on a special stand, forms part of the General Motors display in the south wing of the building at a Century of Progress.

Chevrolet Sales Are Largest Since Nineteen Thirty-One

Chevrolet dealers reported the sale at retail of 65,761 new cars and trucks for the largest single month's retail deliveries since June, 1931, W. S. Knudsen, president and general manager announced today.

In May, 1932, the figure was 48,210 units, a gain of 36 per cent, and in April this year 53,936 units, Mr. Knudsen said.

Retail sales reported in 1933 for the five months ended May 31 totaled 226,388 new cars and trucks as compared with 209,792 in the like 1932 period, he stated.

Each one of the three ten-day periods in May showed a constantly growing margin of gain over the comparable periods of a year ago. Figures as announced by Mr. Knudsen

Despite the sharp upsurge of new sales, used stocks in dealers' hands remained unchanged during the month, while new car stocks in the field dropped several hundred units due to retail sales running ahead of factory projections, Mr. Knudsen said. Manufacturing schedules had to be increased frequently during the month to meet expanding dealer commitments.

The sharp rise from April into May was much more than seasonal with its company, Mr. Knudsen said, indicating a belated buying season and promising to bring June retail volume up close to May.

GOODRICH TO RAISE WAGES ON JUNE 15

A 10 per cent increase in salaries, affecting more than 20,000 workers in the United States, will be put into effect on June 15 by the Goodrich Rubber Company, it was announced here Saturday by J. S. Kidwiler Jr., manager of Goodrich Silvertown, Inc.

Mr. Kidwiler said that from 300 to 400 employees of the company in Atlanta would be benefited by the increase.

He said the increase was due to better business done by the company, and also to its wish to co-operate with President Roosevelt in his nationwide plan to improve employment conditions.

AMERICA knows CARS —and Here is What It Thinks of Pontiac—the Economy Straight Eight

The 4-door Sedan $695, f. o. b. Pontiac. Special equipment extra.

PONTIAC has already built and shipped MORE CARS than for ALL of 1932.

Everywhere the swing is to BALANCED VALUE!

Ask your dealer for a copy of the booklet, "What do you mean—Balanced Value." It is free.

One of the truths of business is that Success is proof of value. This sales record of Pontiac—the Economy Straight Eight—therefore, is important to every prospective car buyer in the low price field.

America knows cars—and when the American public goes for a car the way it is going for the Economy Straight Eight Pontiac, you know that the car is right. Especially in a year like this, when everybody is out for Value.

Balanced Value the Cause of Pontiac's Popularity

You may ask what is balanced value? It is simply this—that Pontiac is a car so well designed, so carefully engineered, so honestly built—with all its parts so well balanced, that it goes on giving carefree service for many more thousands of miles than are possible with a lesser car.

Compare Pontiac with any car at or near Pontiac's price. Pontiac is a Straight Eight—a modern car, not just a new car.

It has a 77-horsepower straight eight engine which gives flash acceleration and 78 real miles per hour. That's performance.

Owners claim 15 miles and more to the gallon. That's real economy. Pontiac is a big car—wheelbase of 115 inches—overall length from bumper to bumper 181 inches. That means comfort and easy riding.

It weighs 3265 pounds (curb weight 4-door Sedan)—not just dead weight, but balanced weight that assures big car roadability—safety—ruggedness and long life.

The new Fisher Ventilation System—exclusive to General Motors cars—is typical of Pontiac's value. Without it no car is modern. You've never really enjoyed hot summer motoring until you've experienced the comfort of controlled car ventilation as only Fisher provides it.

Take a demonstration. Buy not only a new car, but a modern car—Pontiac the Economy Straight Eight.

Annual Southern Amateur Golf Meet Opens Here Tuesday

PERRY FACING TOUGH BATTLE

Match Play Starts Thursday Over Old East Lake Course.

By Roy White.

With Charlie Yates, Georgia amateur champion, and Emmett Spicer, Memphis, former champion, definitely out, the battle this week over the old East Lake course for the annual southern amateur crown appears wide open and one of the keenest in the history of southern golf. Yates leaves this week to represent Tech in the national intercollegiate next week and Spicer, due to the pressure of business, decided not to enter.

Practice rounds opened Saturday afternoon, but no sensational scores were recorded as the players did not give their scores particular attention and resorted instead to a round of orientation.

Opening shots in the tournament proper will be fired Tuesday morning when the first of two days' qualifying will start on the two courses simultaneously. Wednesday will be given over to the final 18 holes qualifying. Players who qualify over one course Tuesday will play the other Wednesday and vice versa.

FINALS SATURDAY. Match play starts Thursday morning with two rounds during the day. Two more rounds follow Friday and the finals will be played Saturday.

Three divisions of 32 players each will be formed and the winning and losing 16 in each group will form a field of 16.

The East Lake courses will be closed to members at 11 o'clock today, at which time official practice for the southern amateur will start. Druid Hills, Capital City and Ansley Park have extended the use of their courses to East Lake members during the week.

Entries will close at 6 o'clock Monday night and pairings for the qualifying rounds will be drawn at that time.

Low Arnold, president of the Southern Amateur Golf Association; Veazy Rainwater, secretary-treasurer; Keith Conway, East Lake, and George Sargent, the Tech Lake pro, together with W. C. Sherwood, Memphis pro, the tourney starter, will be in charge of the week's play.

CLASS OF FIELD. Outstanding contenders for the crown now worn by Sam Perry, of Birmingham, Ala. are Flossie Greenshaw, Montgomery, Ala., runner-up last year; Billy Howell, the sensational young Richmond (Va.) star; Edwin McClure, of Shreveport, La., four times Louisiana champion; Gene Vinson, Meridian, Miss., who last week won his third consecutive Mississippi championship; Alan Smith, of Asheville, N. C.; Earl Stokes, Louisville, Ky.; Polly Boyd, Bowling Green, Tenn.; Darden Hampton and Wilbur Oakes Jr., all of Chattanooga, Tenn.; Jack Turner, Asheville, runner-up in 1931; Chastain Harris, Memphis, the 1931 winner; Glen and Oney Crisman, of Selma, Ala., and a host of others who will fill the entries on arrival.

ATLANTA ENTRIES. Atlanta's delegation will be headed by Scott Hudson Jr., the city champion; Tommy Barnes, runner-up in the city last year; Julius Hughes, former city champion, and Charlie Black Jr., a former city and Georgia champion.

East Lake's entries include, in addition to Hudson and Barnes, Arch Martin, Jim Malone, Muggsy Smith, Richard Hickey, L. R. Hunter and Dr. W. C. Warren.

From Druid Hills Julius Hughes, Garrison Ballenger, Stanley Holditch, Jack Borthman, Bill Terrell, Jimmy Wilson, Bobby Chambers, Veazy Rainwater, Joe Horack Jr. and C. C. McGee.

Pete Barnes, Jack Ezell and L. T. Flockberg will represent West End. Dan Sage Jr., C. A. Meryman, Jack Cook, Billy Kingdon, John Kilpatrick, Gene Giffard, Charlie Ansley, P. G. Kinnel Jr., and Gene Dahlbender will enter from Ansley Park.

Chick Ridley and Dr. Ben Jones have entered from Black Rock, and B. N. Hanby will represent Piedmont park.

Claude Harmon entered Saturday from Dubbs Dread course.

Among those who have good over the course Saturday were Scott Hudson Jr., Tommy Barnes, Billy Howell, Judd Brumley, Knoxville; R. M. McKeithan, Athens, Ga.; Jack Toomer, Asheville, N. C.; Ralph Redmond, Tampa, Fla.; Epps Brown and Julius Hughes.

Dave and Charlie Black Jr. will head Capital City's delegation to the southern amateur at East Lake this week. Others from the Capital City Club will include: Hugh Carter Jr., Joe Swan, John Grant Sr., Hugh and Charlie Sannally, Oliver and Bill Healey, R. A. McCord, Rob Robinson, Carroll Latimer, W. C. Wardlaw III and T. T. Williams Jr.

Chattanooga Sends New Young Star. CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., June 17.—A Chattanooga amateur golf tournament which was held here last week without a youthful sensation. Last year Johnny Morris, Birmingham's ex-caddy, supplied the spark of flaming youth by going to the semifinals. The year before Sunday Horner, of Nashville, captured the qualifying medal and Charlie Yates came through with a great performance to end Emmett Spicer and gain the quarter-final berth.

This year Chattanooga may furnish the outstanding threat of the younger generation in Lou Gehrig, 17-year-old son of the famous baseball star. This morning Gehrig fired one of the greatest rounds ever at the Chattanooga Golf and Country Club, scene of the 1931 Southern. He uncocked eight pars and five birdies in rapid order to eliminate Gene Cassiday, 6 and 5, and gain the right to play Darden Hampton in the final of the annual club championship.

Lou is now in the quarter-finals of the city championship. Friday he shot a 72 at Briarcliff to survive in the next round. He qualified with 74. Lou will compete in the Southern, barring a new injury to an ankle sprain sustained Wednesday. He will enter with his father, Bill Gehrig, 1932 Chattanooga Golf and Country Club champion.

MARATHON RACE WON BY KOMONEN

WASHINGTON, June 17.—(UP)—Dave Komonen, Finnish runner from Toronto, Ontario, won the National Amateur Athletic Union championship marathon today. His time for the 26-mile 385-yard course from Mount Vernon to the White House was 2:53:43.

With the trip to Buffalo, members of the Tech team will miss both the southern amateur and the Georgia State tourney at Thomasville July 4, as the boys will return to Atlanta by boat.

Paramount Tickets Won With Birdies. A. C. Crandall and H. H. Ellison won tickets to see the Bobby Jones golf feature at the Paramount theater by scoring birdies on the 15th green at Druid Hills Saturday afternoon. Other players who scored birdies on the 15th hole will be given similar tickets.

No. 9 on the old course at East Lake, the 15th hole, is a par 3. It was the first time in several weeks that a single player has finished first and there were more than 60 participants in the event.

Second place was well divided between J. W. Welch, Robert Ingram, G. R. Adair, George Rudolph, J. W. Lundeen, A. G. Maxwell and Bill Crum.

Others who finished well among the leaders were J. C. Malone, George Fogg, R. G. Parks, F. S. Atkins, C. C. McGee and B. E. Shields.

"Dog Fight" Today At Druid Hills. Members of the East Lake and Druid Hills golf clubs will play a mixed "dog fight" tournament this afternoon on the Druid Hills course. The East Lake members have been extended the use of the Druid Hills course during the week and today's event is the first of several during the week for the visitors, who do not participate in the Southern.

Qualifying Round Date Extended. Play in the qualifying rounds of the annual Governing Board trophy tourney for members of the Capital City Country Club has been extended through Sunday, June 25, it was announced Saturday afternoon.

SHARKEY ENDS HARD WORKOUTS; CARNERA READY

Baer Victory Keeps Spotlight Away From Title Scrap.

By Edward J. Neil.

Associated Press Sports Writer. NEW YORK, June 17.—(UP)—With Jack Dempsey and his high-powered wallop, Max Baer, touring the country in exhibitions, and Max Schmeling far over the sea on his way to Germany and matrimony, interest today turned to Champion Jack Sharkey and his challenger, huge Primo Carnera, who meet in a 15-round title battle June 20.

Although both gladiators have been in serious training for weeks, little or nothing was heard of them as the fans concentrated on the first heavy-weight match of the outdoor season, Baer's astounding knockout conquest of Germany's former champion.

In fact, Sharkey's conditioning has progressed to such a point at his camp at Orangeburg, N. Y., that he is beginning to "toast" in training with two full weeks remaining before the tussle in Madison Square Garden's bowl on Long Island. Carnera likewise has most of his heavy work behind him, so much so that it was found necessary to rest him a couple of days during the past week for fear that at a mere 262 pounds the Italian was going "fatie."

FAST JABBER. So far neither warrior has shown any intent in training workouts to vary styles that carried Sharkey to his world title victory over Schmeling last summer, and made Carnera the fastest left-hand jabber of all the ring giants.

Once before Sharkey and Carnera met—almost two years ago—and for five rounds Carnera popped Jack's ears back with left jabs. Trying to box and jab with him, Sharkey failed to get past Carnera's tree-trunk left arm and was consistently outpointed.

But from the fifth round on, Sharkey changed his tactics and Carnera was lost. The Boston Sailor weaved under the giant's left arm, came up inside with left hooks to the head and ribs. He took immediate command and late in the battle landed Carnera to the floor with a looping left to the chin.

SHARKEY CANNY. Although Carnera has improved tremendously since that night, he still relies chiefly on his amazing speed for so large a man, and his straight left hand. Sharkey, heavier, slower, and older, is still the canniest of the heavyweights. The bettors, however, hold him now a 5-to-5 favorite whereas he was 5 to 1 to win the first time they met.

Almost as interesting as the fight itself is the friendly promotional struggle being waged between Dempsey and Madison Square Garden, the organization that, under Tex Rickard, made him wealthy. If Sharkey wins, there is a possibility that he will shift to the Dempsey banner for a September match with Baer. Carnera is under contract to the Garden in the joint promotion of a Garden-Baer bout in the fall.

Carnera Enters Bankrupt Petition. NEW YORK, June 17.—(UP)—Primo Carnera, heavyweight champion, managed by a syndicate of Broadway promoters, filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in the United States district court today.

The petition, listing liabilities of $50,000 and assets of $1,182, described Carnera, who will box Jack Sharkey on June 20 for the world's heavy-weight championship, as "an exhibition." Among the claimants were Leon See, his former French manager, for $3,770, and Jeff Dickson, a French fight promoter, for $1,250. Both claims were based upon alleged percentages of the fighter's earnings. The petition also claimed that Carnera claimed of $14,300, representing a judgment in favor of Amelia Termini, waitress in a Soho restaurant, also was listed.

Continued from First Sports Page. pions in the long list who have successfully defended their titles in many southern championships as any other state. The Georgia victories number nine and they began in 1904 when Mansen won. He repeated in 1904. In 1910 F. G. Boyd won for Atlanta. Bobby Jones won in 1917, 1920 and 1922. Perry Adair added a couple more. Gunn came through with one.

Georgia and Louisiana have produced nine champions each. Tennessee has produced six and Alabama has had three. North Carolina and Texas have had one each. The Tennessee and Alabama threats have been greatest in recent years.

MEMPHIS VICTORIES. The Memphis entries, led chiefly by Spicer and Chastain Harris, stepped in during 1930 and 1931. Last year Sam Perry came back to repeat his victory of 1929.

And today will find him practicing over the two courses at East Lake. The southern entries will qualify over two courses, tournament play will be across the rather tough and defiant yardage of the famous old No. 1.

It's a great tournament with plenty of talent and enough challenge in the ancient records to inspire the entries to step out and shoot for them.

Even with Charlie Yates out of a tournament he would be favored to win at East Lake, there are still enough of the home talent left to constitute a real threat.

Army Puncher

CYCLONE SMITH.

HEAVY HITTERS MEET WEDNESDAY

A real slugger battle between two of the south's best punchers is in store at the Cain Arena Wednesday night when "Cyclone" Smith of Port Beaufort, S. C., and Florida's "Red" Benmound tangle with Wild Bill Cox of Macon, in the main bout of a 30-round fistic card.

Smith, whose last appearance here was in an exhibition with Young Strubling, is ranked among the outstanding heavyweights of the south. For several years the Benning battler has held his own with the best in the country, including Joe Knight, Bob Godwin, Maxie Rosenbloom, Battling Bozo, Harry Allen, Eric Lawson, Battling Finch and others. A tear-in eye of a scrapper, the Benning slugger has proven immensely popular wherever he has fought and Matchmaker Gilbert expects him to prove a big favorite with fans here Wednesday night.

In spite of Smith's outstanding record he is favorite to win, due to the heavy-hitting and all-around ability of Wild Bill Cox, the Macon fighter. Cox must be a pleasing type of fighter, for critics give him and his handler, Johnnie Lamb, practically all the credit for reviving the boxing game in Macon to where they are drawing the best crowds in the state. Among Cox's first victims in his Macon fights were two Atlanta fighters, Jack Taylor, who was badly beaten in 10 rounds, and the Atlanta Bozo, who was stopped in a round.

The semi-windup battle between Frank Mackery, hard-hitting heavyweight, and Bull Johnson, of Atlanta, looks like a slugfest. Both are heavy punchers.

RED OAK WINS. Red Oak Baptist defeated the Gleaner Club of the Georgia league. The hit factor of Gaines and Holcomb was the big factor in the victory. Gaines, a double, and Holcomb, a single, scored a total of 10 runs. Red Oak Baptist, .000 013 23-9 15 3. Dair, Jones and Aycock; Green and Holcomb. Empire, Warren.

EPWORTH BOWS. Although Epworth Methodist outlasted the Epworth Baptist, they were unable to win. The game was a close one, with Epworth leading 2-0 in the 9th. Epworth's batting average, while two runs by Kelly was best for the losers. Epworth Workers, .120 012 000-3 9 0. Underwood, .000 010 010-3 11 0. Stipes and Jones; Upson and Coker. Empire, Morgan.

PORTERDALE SEATON. Hitting in the Georgia league, Seaton defeated second-place Porterdale, 22 to 4. Frank Smith, .000 010 010-3 11 0. Williams and Jones; Digby, Ball and Underwood. Empire, Warren.

Sewanee League. A double, single and two home runs by Sargent, third baseman for Patillo Methodist, in the 9th, won the game for Sewanee, 10 to 4. Sargent, .000 010 010-3 11 0. Williams and Jones; Digby, Ball and Underwood. Empire, Warren.

ANTIOCH WINNER. A double, single and two home runs by Sargent, third baseman for Patillo Methodist, in the 9th, won the game for Antioch Baptist, 10 to 4. Sargent, .000 010 010-3 11 0. Williams and Jones; Digby, Ball and Underwood. Empire, Warren.

LAST END SWAMPED. The batters of Mount Carmel Christian fattened their batting average at the expense of the VSB. The VSB batters out enough hits for a 27-to-6 win. Williams, Kelley, Medlock and Victory all secured four hits each. Mt. Carmel Christian, .137 408 342-27 24 4. East End Methodist, .101 011 000-4 16 3. Williams and Jones; Digby, Ball and Underwood. Empire, Warren.

BREAK EVEN. Ousley Chapel and Hills Park Baptist ditch their terrible record in the VSB. Hills Park winning the first game, 3 to 1, and losing the nightcap, 3 to 1. The Ousley Chapel batters gave the Hills Park batters the big edge in the opener. With Walton's hitting and fielding a big feature for the winners, in the final game, "Lefty" Edge buried a beautiful game for Ousley Chapel, winning a beautiful Ferguson in the first frame.

FIRST GAME. Hills Park Baptist, .000 111 2-3 10 1. Ousley Chapel, .000 120 000-3 6 4. Duncan and Hollis; Edge and Brown. Empire, Warren.

SECOND GAME. Ousley Chapel, .000 111 2-3 10 1. Hills Park Baptist, .100 000 0-1 7 2. Ferguson, Edge and Kelly; Camp and Bacon. Empire, Warren.

ROCK SPRINGS WINS, 3-2, OVER NORTH ATLANTA

Victory Gives Presbyterians First Half Honors in Piedmont.

Rock Springs Presbyterian defeated North Atlanta Baptist, 3 to 2, at Piedmont park Saturday, and clinched first-half honors in the Piedmont league.

Bird Hope was the big gunner for the winners, hitting safely on three of his five trips to the plate. Spectacular base-running of "Shorty" Roberts was another bright light of the victory. Morris Hazlrigs hit best for the losers.

The losers failed in their attempt to work the old squeeze play with the winning run on third in the final frame. North Atlanta, .000 001 001-2 7 1. Rock Springs, .002 000 001-3 10 1. Cole and Gibson; Booker and Wooten. Empire, Van Houten.

INMAN SLUGS. Garnering 23 hits from the hurling efforts of Jones and Phillips, Inman Tards easily defeated Virginia, 10 to 0. Inman's lead hit was a double. Jones and Phillips hit best for the losers.

ALPHA SWAMPED. Woodlawn Presbyterian batters hit at the opportune time to defeat Alpha Class, 11 to 1. Johnny Skinner, of the losers, was the name of the match. Woodlawn batters hit in the first, second, third, fourth, fifth, sixth, seventh, eighth, ninth, and tenth frames to put the game on ice.

Dixie League. CALVARY WINS. Calvary Methodist defeated Kirkwood Baptist, 3 to 2, in the Dixie league. The star of the game was his triple drive in two runs to the first base. The victors lead the losers were unable to mount a comeback. Calvary won a real mound duel, each man pitching but five hits.

Kirkwood Baptist, .100 100 000-2 3 2. Calvary Methodist, .200 000 010-3 5 2. Carter and Morrow; Florida and Bryant. Empire, Warren.

CHAMBLEE LOSES. Chamblee played their best game of the season but were unable to shake the Jim that has been in them in the Dixie league. Chamblee lost to the winners, 11 to 0. Chamblee batters hit in the first, second, third, fourth, fifth, sixth, seventh, eighth, ninth, and tenth frames to put the game on ice.

HARD HITTING. Grace Methodist and Patillo Methodist staged a slugfest Saturday afternoon. Patillo winning, 22 to 4. Grace batters hit in the first, second, third, fourth, fifth, sixth, seventh, eighth, ninth, and tenth frames to put the game on ice.

News of STAGE and SCREEN

EDITED BY RALPH T. JONES

Grand Has New Type Picture In 'I Cover the Water Front'

A melancholy interest tinges the enjoyment to be gained at Loew's Grand theater this week, where "I Cover the Water Front" is the current offering. Ernest Torrence, who died a few weeks ago, is seen with Claudette Colbert and Ben Lyon as one of the principal players. It is Ernest Torrence's last screen role, and one of the greatest ones of the year.

Miss Colbert is highly effective, too, as the carelessly reared daughter of old Eli Kirk, roustabout seaman and smuggler. This daughter of his has somehow grown up to be beautiful and extraordinarily wise in the ways of the world she knows. Loyal to her father, she thinks nothing of following him, when he is ashore and on a bender, into any of the dives which dot the water front.

In one of these she encounters Joe Miller, water front reporter for the local paper. Joe has been trying for years to prove his theory that old Eli Kirk smuggles Chinese aliens into America. Attached to Eli's daughter, he makes love to her, hoping to learn something of Eli's methods. But he discovers that Julie is entirely confident of her father's honesty—that whatever others think, Julie has implicit faith in him. Then, too, Miller discovers how easy it is to make love to this strange and fascinating girl. Presently, he is head over heels in love with the daughter of the man he is trying to bring to justice.

"I Cover the Water Front" is a presentation of a phase of life which has not previously been brought to the screen. The colorful seamen and their ways of living present a picturesque background for a story which combines the excitement and horrors of smuggling with one of the most unconventional of love stories.

It is to be seen at Loew's Grand through Thursday, when the program will change, bringing "When Ladies Meet" to this theater.

'The Billion-Dollar Scandal,' At Rialto, Boasts Great Cast

"The Billion-Dollar Scandal," feature attraction now at the Rialto theater, is one of those pictures that carry many angles of interest. In the first place it is a corking good story, with romance, suspense and a brilliant plot. Secondly, it is based upon a national incident that, several years ago, shocked the entire world. This is the fraudulent oil land leases that resulted in many of the biggest figures in public life going to prison, to disgrace and to suicide.

Thirdly, the picture boasts one of the greatest casts ever assembled for a single production. Robert Armstrong, Constance Cummings, Olga Baclanova, Frank Morgan, James Gleason, Irving Pichel, Warren Hymer, Frank Albertson, Sidney Toler, Hale Hamilton, Edmund Breese are only a few of the favorite players who take central roles.

It is a Paramount production, directed by Harry Joe Brown. The story deals with the efforts of a reformed convict and his pals to bring to justice a group of millionaires who have engineered a tremendous steal from the general public through fake leases of nationally-owned oil lands. Efforts to "frame" the convict and a heartless murder plot are involved. At the end, however, the pitiless glare of publicity uncovers the oil fraud, though the man who perpetrated it himself goes back to prison for breaking his parole regulations. But he goes back with the hope of early release and a real chance to reform his life. While the bigger crooks have been exposed to Atlanta for lifelong disgrace and death.

It is one of the most powerful things ever placed upon the screen and a picture that will not only be intensely enjoyed by all who see it, but will also be the subject of much conversation long after its run has ended.

On Wednesday Manager W. T. Murray brings another excellent feature to his theater in "Night of Terror," a chilling murder mystery combined with a delightful love story. It is a Columbia production directed by Benjamin Stoloff with a cast headed by Bela Lugosi, Sally Blane, Wallace Ford and Tully Marshall. It involves a series of gruesome murders and a plot which leaves the audience mystified right to the surprise solution at the end. Few cleverer stories of its type have ever been brought to the screen.

With two such feature attractions this week and with fascinating short subjects added to the program, the Rialto's offerings should compel every discriminating theatergoer to arrange two visits to this popular home of bargain entertainment this week.

You'll Meet 'Em on Atlanta Screens This Week

'Her Secret,' at Paramount, Dramatic Hospital Romance

What secrets are hidden behind the still lips of the sleeping beauty, who for three days and nights has been unconscious in Room 419 of a great city's emergency hospital, after a brutal beating by unknown assailants?

Here is the thrilling situation in "Her Secret," which opened at the Paramount theater Saturday with a cast including James Dunn, Gloria Stuart, David Manners, Jack LaRue, Shirley Grey, Johnny Hines and William Harrigan.

Opening to the clarion ring of alarms and the shrill shriek of sirens as an ambulance hurtles through crowded streets on its way to the emergency hospital, the picture maintains its surging drive to the conclusion.

It is the exciting story of Dr. Daniel French, chief of staff of the hospital (played by James Dunn), through whose fingers flows the turmoil of a great city in which he fights death, saves life. Emergencies are his stock in trade until love brings an emergency he can't handle in the person of the girl in 419.

Beaten by unknown assailants, and left for dead in a dark alley, she is brought to the hospital, and after a terrific three-day struggle, French is able to bring her back to life.

When the newspapers carry the news of her recovery the men who investigated the first attack send a gunman to kill her, and again, she escapes death by a miracle.

Afraid to talk, she refuses to tell the police, or Dr. French anything about herself. But when pressure is brought to bear on the hospital authorities to release her, she realizes that death awaits her outside the protecting hospital. Then she confides in French, and they are confronted with the problem of her life and death and their own happiness. How this problem is solved furnishes a breathless conclusion to this swift-paced drama.

Of importance to all Atlantans, and particularly to lovers of golf, is the first of the new Bobby Jones series which appears on this program. The first is entitled "The Hands and the Grip." This feature, besides being instructional is most entertaining with Bobby using as his pupil, Joe E. Brown.

Bob Hess has an unusually novel organologue "Phonology," and there is "East Face," a Vitaphone musical comedy.

Ruth Chatterton Triumphs In 'Lilly Turner' at Georgia

Once again Ruth Chatterton has established her right to be considered the first dramatic actress of her generation upon the screen, by virtue of her performance as the star of "Lilly Turner," which opened at the Georgia theater yesterday. It is not too much to assert that no other star could have equaled her astounding delineation of the soiled, bedraggled queen of the carnivals and sideshows who emerges, through tragedy, to a loftiness of self-sacrifice.

"Lilly Turner" is a story of lights and shadows, of heights and depths—with the shadows and the depths darkening most of the drama until the appearance of the young man, who, to her utter amazement, despite her tarnished past, falls in love with her. Incredible as such a romance may seem when outlined in cold words, Ruth Chatterton and George Brent succeed in making it magnificently believable and true.

In its tremendous sweep, "Lilly Turner" recalls no other performance save one or two of the star's outstanding successes. It ranks in power with "Madame X," Miss Chatterton, revealing new abilities as an artist in every sense, is splendidly seconded by a cast of unusual power. Guy Kibbee is present with another of his typical characterizations as the lecherous medicine show doctor. Frank McHugh, as the kind-hearted speller who offers Lilly Turner the protection of his name but cannot give up drinking to please her, turns in his finest performance of his career. As Miss Chatterton's leading man, George Brent is given his first opportunity in many months to demonstrate the real strength of his personality.

"Lilly Turner" will live for many months as Ruth Chatterton's masterpiece. If you liked "Frisco Jenny" you will love "Lilly Turner." Added attractions on the program include a comedy, a novelty and Fox News.

Pictures, Vaudeville, Music on Fox Bill

The feature picture on the Fox bill this week is titled "Professional Sweetheart," with a cast headed by Zazu Pitts, Ginger Rogers, Edgar Kennedy, Norman Foster and Frank McHugh.

On the stage, Fanchon & Marco bring another vaudeville show, featuring an act known as the Balala-hou Five. Another act is Lowe and Hite. Henry Hite, as he is known on the stage, is really Henry Mullins, young Atlanta who now stands 7 feet 9 inches tall, and who left Atlanta about three years ago to enter vaudeville.

Mel Ruick, with his band, presents the overture, "Light Cavalry," and Jimmy Beers is at the organ.

Alamo Monday Film Is "No Other Woman"

Many a woman who stands by her husband in the lean, hard years, scrimping and sacrificing, loses him to an alluring young damsel after he acquires worldly success.

That he doesn't have to stay lost, especially if the wife is clever, is proven by "No Other Woman," RKO-Radio picture coming to the Alamo No. 2 theater Monday.

Irene Dunne, Charles Rickford and Gwili Andre form the eternal triangle in this drama.

Atlantans Get Habit Of Visiting Buckhead

With an increasingly large number of amusement seeking Atlantans, from all parts of the city getting into the habit of visiting the Buckhead theater, Manager Willis Davis announces for this week four return engagements of pictures that have scored large successes in their first presentations.

This summer it is becoming fashionable to enjoy the pleasant ride to Buckhead, either by auto or street car, through one of Atlanta's loveliest residential sections, see a good picture in the Buckhead theater, one of the most charming houses in the Atlanta territory and always comfortably and healthfully cooled, and ride home in the cool of the evening. Not a bad program for a summer evening, at that. And there are no parking worries in Buckhead.

On Monday and Tuesday the feature attraction is "Topaze," one of the best roles ever played by John Barrymore. He changes from a humble and imposed-upon school teacher into a regular fox of big business, and in the process acquires a lovely lady friend portrayed by Myrna Loy.

On Wednesday Constance Cummings will be seen in "Our Betters," the pictureization of Somerset Maugham's brilliant play of the same title.

Thursday and Friday brings what is, perhaps, the best picture yet made with the World War as a background. It is "Private Jones," with Lee Tracy in the title role as a doughboy who thought war a lot of foolishness, tried to escape the draft and, once in France, expressed his opinion so forcefully he was in constant disgrace, except when he had to play the hero to save his comrades.

On Saturday that brilliant detective yarn taken from The American Weekly, "Secrets of the French Police," will be shown. It is the best thing about the murder mystery line yet put out on the screen.

Carefully selected short subjects will be found on each program.

Old Favorites Play At DeKalb for Week

Beginning Monday the DeKalb will start a revival program of the big pictures of 1932 and will offer first "Call Her Savage," featuring Clara Bow in her comeback picture.

Tuesday Joe E. Brown is starred in his hit comedy of 1932, "Fireman, Save My Child," in which he is torn between the duty of being a fireman or a baseball pitcher. Wednesday, Marie Dressler and Polly Moran are running wild in "Politics."

Thursday, George White's famous musical comedy, "Flying High," is again offered with Bert Lahti, famous stage and radio comedian, playing the leading role. Others in the cast include Charlotte Greenwood, Evalyn Knapp and Pat O'Brien.

Richard Barthelmess is the featured star in Friday's offering, "Alias the Doctor," an interesting story of a

Leading Lady

Mary Ann Dentler, leading lady with the Peruchi Players, presenting stock at the Erlanger theater. The production for this week, beginning Monday night, is "Fighting Friends."

ALWAYS ASK FOR YOUR JINKY RECEIPTS.

S. R. O. by Ralph T. Jones

If the increase in attendance at the performances of the Peruchi Players, at the Erlanger theater, maintains the ratio it has shown for the three weeks the company has been here, it won't be many weeks before that theater is filled to capacity at every performance. Never has a stock company proved more exactly just what Atlanta wants than this. The play this week is "Fighting Friends." Grant Gordon returns to the cast after a week's rest.

As a newspaperman who has never "covered the waterfront," I am open to offers for such a job if there is a guarantee that someone as alluring as Claudette Colbert is to be found on the run. Just like Ben Lyon finds her this week at Loew's Grand, where "I Cover the Water Front" is the feature attraction. It is, by the way, an excellent picture, reported on by the old pre-viewer in this column some weeks ago.

Manager Earl Holden, of the Georgia, came home Friday after a two-week vacation in which he included various experiences not usually listed as holiday delights. Ask him to tell you about 'em some day. He has lost 20 pounds, but looks fitter than when he left. Back on the job boosting "Lilly Turner," with the great Ruth Chatterton, now playing his house.

There is a midnight show at the Rialto theater tonight. At exactly one minute past the mystic hour, the theater will offer "Ann Carver's Profession," distinctly one of the better pictures of the season. This is in the nature of an advance showing, with the picture booked to open its regular run next Saturday. Pay Way does by far the best work of her career in this picture, by the way, ably supported by Gene Raymond.

The entire house personnel at the Grand are helping exploit "When Ladies Meet," a really great picture which comes to their house next Friday. All are enthusiastic and expect a hard week's work handling the crowds. When you see the picture you'll say their enthusiasm was justified.

There are few more interesting figures in Atlanta than young Henry Jones, who was featured last week in the Kiddie Revue. Henry has been in three of these annual productions, now. He was a patient himself at the Scottish Rite hospital when the first two were put on. You know the revues are benefits for the patients at that hospital for crippled children. In his first revue Henry sang on crutches and with his body in a brace. The second year he could do without the crutches, but still wore the brace. And last week he sang, just like any other healthy youngster, without brace or crutches or any artificial aid. His teacher is Miss Martha Smith. That's what plenty of milk and the Scottish Rite institution can do for crippled young 'uns.

Manager Willis Davis at the Buckhead played "Be Mine Tonight," one of the most delightful pictures ever made, for eleven days of excellent boxoffice records. After the picture had been turned down by one of the big uptown theaters. With such attractions as this, and selected second-runs in between times, the habit of driving out to Buckhead to see a good picture, with the added delight of the pleasant ride there and back, is rapidly assuming the proportion of a general fad.

Make a note now to reserve the night of Tuesday week for the University of Illinois Glee Club, which sings at the Glenn Memorial auditorium. They're good.

Diary of a Pre-Viewer.

WEDNESDAY—Saw "The Nuisance" at Loew's Grand. This is Lee Tracy's latest and, to my mind, the best thing he has done. Perhaps it isn't Tracy's work that makes it such good entertainment, but the story. And, besides, one of the best feminine players has the lead opposite Lee, Madge Evans. The story is of the conflict between a shy lawyer—who has brought ambulance-chasing down to a fine art—and a street railway company. How the lawyer, through fake witnesses, a crooked, drunken doctor and other accessories, makes the company lose scores of damage suits is brilliantly depicted. In the end, of course, he is trapped by a

The Atlanta Constitution,
Atlanta,
Ga.

Gentlemen:- Attention Mr. Julian Harris

The Volunteer Food Stores of Atlanta, Kelley Bros. Co. and the writer wish to thank The Atlanta Constitution for the wonderful way in which the Constitution sponsored the Volunteer cooking school and food show. You packed the house the first day, the second day, the third day and the last day people were turned away by the hundreds because they could not find standing room.

It is beyond my conception how it is possible for a Great Newspaper like the Constitution to instill in all their employees from the Chief Executive down to the janitor such a spirit of friendliness, pep, vim, enthusiasm, go-get-it-tiveness and above all the ability to accomplish your purpose.

Conservatively I believe fifty thousand people are today talking about the Volunteer Food Stores' unusual and delightfully different food show and cooking school. Our hat is off to the Atlanta Constitution for packing em in. This was done in mid-summer when everyone said that it could not be done. Your paper certainly has public appeal.

Yours very truly,

Volunteer Food Stores Inc.

The picturesque Catalie Hankin played two movements of Mozart's Concerto in G. Major, evincing pianistic talent in musical tone and technique. Henry Bak may have two Cramer studies and Mendelssohn's "Hunting Song" with brilliant technique and dramatic tone, eliciting admiration. The rich mezzo contralto voice of Caroline Holliday gave tones of warmth and beauty in her singing of "Plaisir d'Amour" and "The Benediction."

The audience, composed of musicians and critics, were kept up in anticipation of the masterpieces of Beethoven, the Sonata, "Appassionata," played by the forceful reading of excerpts from Robert Schumann's Beethoven by Henry Peebles.

Mrs. Fairlie rose to spiritual heights in her grasp of the dramatic construction of the great musical drama. The Passion of the soul; then the whirlwind of passion in the finale she pictured with dramatic fire.

Mrs. Wilson's Pupils Appear in Recital.

A most interesting program was given in Mrs. Wayne Wilson's studio the past week.

It opened with 5-year-old Andrew Fairlie, who gave his original ideas in dynamics by playing "The Chinese Theater," Lucia, and Margaret Fairlie played "Menuetts" by Mozart, Beethoven and Bach. The picturesque Catalie Hankin played two movements of Mozart's Concerto in G. Major, evincing pianistic talent in musical tone and technique. Henry Bak may have two Cramer studies and Mendelssohn's "Hunting Song" with brilliant technique and dramatic tone, eliciting admiration. The rich mezzo contralto voice of Caroline Holliday gave tones of warmth and beauty in her singing of "Plaisir d'Amour" and "The Benediction."

The audience, composed of musicians and critics, were kept up in anticipation of the masterpieces of Beethoven, the Sonata, "Appassionata," played by the forceful reading of excerpts from Robert Schumann's Beethoven by Henry Peebles.

Mrs. Fairlie rose to spiritual heights in her grasp of the dramatic construction of the great musical drama. The Passion of the soul; then the whirlwind of passion in the finale she pictured with dramatic fire.

By BESSIE S. STAFFORD. CHICAGO, Ill., June 17.—Georgia is represented at the Century of Progress Exposition by an artistic and creditable exhibit, located between the exhibits of California and North Dakota, in the triangular Court of States just at the rear of the Federal building. The exterior is painted white, the name "Georgia" being lettered in marine blue above the entrance, and the state is one of the three southern states represented at the Chicago fair, the triptych being completed by exhibits from Mississippi and Florida.

Aged and benign Uncle Henry Mathews, the "colored gentleman from Atlanta," is the stately figure standing at the entrance of the hall, and injects the atmosphere of the southland of the romantic antebellum days into the picture. His long white hair and beard testify that 90 winters have passed over his head, and his respectful and courtly manner is noticeable. He was for 25 years the sexton at the First Methodist church when the edifice stood on the site of the present building, and served as sexton at Big Bethel for an equal number of years. "Uncle Henry" played the role of St. Peter in "Heaven Bound," and he loves to talk about carrying the keys to the pearly gates in the aforementioned playlet.

The Roosevelt historical quilt, worked in Turkey red and Yale blue floss, hangs on the wall above the desk of Russell R. Whitman, who is in charge of the exhibit. The quilt was designed and made by Mrs. George H. Brewer, an Atlantian, and it is bordered with hand-made lace. President Franklin D. Roosevelt's aristocratic profile is worked at the top, being encircled by yellow floss from which radiates sun-like rays, symbolizing that "F. D. R." has won his place in the sun. In the handle of the large basket of flowers in the center of the quilt is the date of his inauguration, with the date of his birth and marriage occupying conspicuous places at the side of the basket. The quilt denotes that 472 votes were cast for President Roosevelt in the November election. The name of each state is inscribed in floss with the number of votes cast in each state worked in blue floss below, and 24 states and votes are placed on either side of the quilt.

Beautiful Murals. Beautiful murals framed in gold and hung upon the four walls depict the cluster, the swimming pool, and a bit of the Atlantic ocean at Sea Island Beach; Bulloch Hall at Roswell, where Mittie Bulloch became the bride of the father of the late President Theodore Roosevelt; Tallulah Falls gorge and the hydro-electric generating plant of the Georgia Power Company; Stone mountain, the largest upthrust of solid flawless granite in the world, upon which will be carved the Confederate Memorial; an illustrated map of Georgia, showing its agricultural products and industrial plants; General Oglethorpe landing at Savannah in 1733, and the Eli Whitney cotton gin; an aerial view of Warm Springs showing Georgia Hall, the Little White House, the swimming pool; Martha Berry school, started at Rome some 31 years ago; birthplace and boyhood home of Sidney Lanier at Macon; the Chandler library in the foreground of Wesleyan College, the oldest chartered college for women in the world; the University of Georgia, oldest chartered college in the United States; the Savannah Sugar Refinery; the National Golf Club course at Augusta, and a scene from Colonel T. J. Huston's dairy, cattle and fruit and truck farms.

Unframed murals executed in exquisite color and design line the walls above the framed murals and challenge the visitors' attention. These portray the Atlanta skyline, Tobacco Falls, the Appalachian mountains in north Georgia, peach, apple and pecan orchards, cotton fields and pine tree forests. Branches of pale pink blossoms are arranged in festive array between the upper row of murals. The golden seal of Georgia, its arch and columns entwined in its motto "Wisdom, Justice and Moderation," lettered in marine blue upon the gold background, greets the eyes upon entering the hall, and occupies a position of honor on the wall directly opposite the entrance.

Admiring crowds collect before the portrait of Robert E. Jones Jr., and always refer to the greatest golfer in the history of the grand old game, as "Bobby Jones." The four golf balls by which he won the four putts in the British open and amateur championships in 1930, are displayed beneath the bronze plaque showing the champion in action. His portrait is by Weyman, a famous New York artist, and shows Bobby Jones in his golf togs standing on the green.

Portrait, plaque and golf balls were loaned to the exhibit by the Atlanta Athletic Club.

Luscious Georgia Peaches. Luscious and velvety Georgia-grown peaches filling attractively woven baskets intrigue taste and capture the fancy of the people thronging the aisles every moment of the day and night. Bottled Coca-Cola, one of the delicious and refreshing beverages that helped to make Atlanta famous, vies for favor in the corner near-by the picture of Bobby Jones, the golfer whose prowess made Atlanta famous.

Wild turkeys, quail, squirrel, trout, geese, big-mouth bass, a magnificent collection of minerals and myriads of other things are exhibited in glass cases. The tallest and biggest cotton stalk in the world, containing 715 bolls, occupies a point of vantage in the far end of the hall, the stalk being eight feet high, and is the cynosure of all eyes. On display in other cases are denim from the Canton mills, floral bath mats from the Callaway mills, cotton goods from the West Point mills, towels, towels, bath mats and wash rags and cotton materials. Georgia marble and crystals are exhibited in marvelous arrangement, and show the valuable mineral assets to be found in the Empire State of the South. Pieces of the first gold mined and minted in the United States at Dahlonega in 1838 prove conclusively the leading part Georgia played in the national life of a century ago. A plaster paria reproduction of the home of President Roosevelt, is protected by a glass case. The house is set in a grove of miniature pine trees, such as surround the house at Warm Springs, wherein dwelt Dr. and Mrs. Michael Hoke when the chief executive of the United States is not in residence in Georgia.

Beams could be written about the exhibit, because there is much more to relate, but the history of Georgia, its present and future advantages and opportunities, are being ably presented and promoted in glowing terms by Russell R. Whitman, Mrs. Hilton M. Trus, of Carrollton, a sister of Governor Eugene Talmadge, N. M. Freeman, a graduate of Georgia Tech in the class of 1929, and J. A. Senter, industrial and agricultural agent of the N. C. & St. L. railroad.

Dramatic indeed was the flight of the Macon, the United States navy dirigible, as it wended its silvery way through the azure skyways over the Georgia exhibit on June 13. The empress of the skies represented a century of progress in the ocean of the air, a symbol of the conquest of the thinker and builder. Thousands of people from all parts of the nation and almost every land in the world flocked to the plaza in front of the Court of States to witness the pilgrimage of the majestic Macon, which was escorted by two smaller, silver-covered Goodyear dirigibles. The exact arrival of the Macon over the Century of Progress Exposition was broadcast by radio to every nook and cranny of the grounds, and entering its spectacular voyage the buildings were practically deserted. Its riders were tipped with red, white and blue, the colors being easily discernible to the eye, although the block-long Macon flew a great distance above the position.

Decidedly Educational. The Century of Progress Exposition is decidedly educational in its theme but there is sufficient amusement and the visitor away from the scientific discoveries and inventions, their application to industry and the resultant transformation that has made the world of a century ago.

It would require page after page in the Constitution to describe the striking modernistic designs of the exposition buildings, introducing daring departures in architectural form, and employing colors and planes and surmounts never before attempted. The dramatic effect of light and coloring on the exterior and interior is enchanting and has the charm of the beauty of the lakeshore setting. However, let's try to visualize the Federal building, which guards the entrance to the Court of States. The air fluted towers rising 150 feet in the air around the large dome represent the three branches of the government—administrative, legislative and executive. Massive gold eagles spread their pinion-bowed wings above the entrance of every doorway, giving assurance that all is well with the grand old United States. Three broad shafts of radiant light radiate from behind these towers and seemingly touch the sky. The rays are mirrored in the lagoon in front of the building and are visible from every section of the grounds.

Then again, let's journey to the Electrical building, which houses the exhibits of telephone, electricity, telegraph and radio. It is two stories high, two hundred feet long, and the dominant colors are yellow, red, black, white and blue. The imposing structure is embellished with gorgeous hanging gardens and paved eaves. The U-shaped Hall of Science is painted red, blue and white, and at one corner rises a 176-foot marine blue shaft of light, the home of the Century of Progress Exposition is an encyclopedia come to life and spread out before the eyes in an understanding manner. It tells the story of man's mastery of nature in a kaleidoscopic panorama, which is etched against the shifting background of the sky and Lake Michigan.

Flood lights are turned upon the Court of States at night, and every loyal Georgian thrills with pardonable pride at the sight of the Stars and Stripes fluttering in the breeze above the enormous gold seal of the Empire State of the South, ornamenting the topmost turret of the Court of States. Only a few thousand dollars was spent on Georgia's exhibit, which makes it richly deserving of the praise bestowed upon the display. When compared with the quarter of a million dollars spent by California and the princely sum poured into North Dakota's exhibit, Georgia's history, her resources and development, and the possibility of future progress, has been put before the visitors to the Century of Progress Exposition in a creditable and artistic way at a very small cost.

Among the Atlantians visiting the Georgia exhibit were Mrs. J. O. Wynn, Dr. and Mrs. Troy Bivings, Dr. and Mrs. Frank Bland, Mrs. James E. Paulding, Mrs. Thomas P. Hinman, Miss Nellie Hightower, Roy LeCraw, Mrs. Glenville Giddings, Dorothy Giddings, Glenville Giddings Jr., and Mrs. Virgil Shephard, Mrs. Charles A. Sisson, Mrs. Robert F. Maddox, Mrs. Veazy Rainwater, Miss Martha Edmondson, Crawford Rainwater, Brown Rainwater, Veazy Rainwater Jr., Lupton Rainwater and Preston S. Arkwright.

W.C.T.U. Founder Is Honored In Exhibit at Chicago Exposition

M. Frances Meadors Burghard, Macon,
State W. C. T. U. Editor.

Frances E. Willard, founder of the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union, is receiving another honor. She is given recognition in the exhibit of the National Council of Women in the hall of social sciences at the Chicago Century of Progress Exposition. Many and varied are the memorials to Frances Willard. State school buildings in cosmopolitan cities and modest structures in small towns, settlement houses and hospitals perpetuate her distinguished name. A marble statue in Statuary Hall in the nation's capital, a bust in the Hall of Fame in New York city, busts and tablets in state capitols, handwritten letters, and other mementos of her work for temperance are well known. The pictured statue adorns countless homes and public buildings of the founder of the W. C. T. U.

A portrait of Miss Willard is displayed at the exposition in Chicago in the section of the exhibit devoted to pictures of the 12 famous women leaders of the past century, recently selected in a nation-wide poll of the Ladies' Home Journal and National Council of Women. Frances Willard's mits and other mementos of this temperance leader are among the personal possessions of great women of the past which constitute the human interest feature of the exhibit. A temperance episode also figures in the 60-foot mural which was painted by Miss M. Hildredth Meier, president of the National Temperance Association, for the background of the exhibit. These episodes depict the forces which have played a part in the emancipation of women from the restrictions of the home and include education, business and the professions, social service, suffrage and peace.

Mrs. Ernest Henson, president of the West Virginia W. C. T. U., says in the June issue of her state W. C. T. U. periodical: "Please don't all speak at once for the services of Dr. Mary Harris Armbrister, of Georgia, 'the matchless Mary.' I know you all want her but it will be impossible to meet all requests, her time is limited to two weeks." Mrs. Henson's statement indicates the esteem with which Mrs. Armbrister is held in all other states. She will lead the time-honored Crusade prayer service, which will open the National W. C. T. U. convention at Milwaukee the morning of June 30. Another honor will come to this state when the Georgia W. C. T. U. president, Mrs. Mary Scott Russell, responds to the addresses of welcome at the national convention.

The sixth district W. C. T. U. meeting at the Baptist church in Davisboro Friday was a success from every viewpoint. The president, Mrs. A. W. Voight, of Macon, presided at the morning session. R. L. McKenney, former editor of the Macon News, Mrs. Florence Ewell Atkins, Milledgeville, national lecturer, Mrs. L. L. Miller, Waynesboro, state W. C. T. U. corresponding secretary, were the speakers.

Mrs. R. N. R. Bardwell Announces Summer Rates for Y. W. C. A. Guests

Mrs. R. N. R. Bardwell, chairman of Y. W. C. A. residence committee, announces special reduced rates on certain rooms for summer boarders at the Y residence, which is located at 82 Baker street, N. W. These nominal prices and the nearness to the downtown area, which means a saving of car fare, enables the girl on a small salary to live in comfort in the heart of the city.

The girl who lives at the Y not only enjoys a quiet room and well-balanced nutritious meals, but there are spacious parlors where she may entertain friends; laundry and sewing room facilities; maid service in the rooms and other convenient arrangements. She is invited to attend all Y. W. C. A. recreational activities held at 27 Auburn street and Y. W. C. A. members are recorded privileges of the swimming pool without cost and in many cases free medical exams are arranged. Impromptu parties, Sunday afternoon teas, and regular vesper services provide entertainment and inspiration.

The reduced rates makes rooms on the third floor of the Y now available for $4 per week, which includes three meals per day and all Y conveniences. Arrangements may be made whereby rooms without meals may be obtained at $2.50 per week. For information about single or large rooms, double rooms call Mrs. K. L. Manning, secretary, Walnut 9759.

A party of 16 delegates to the Southern Baptist student conference en route to Ridgecrest, N. C., made reservations at the Y for last Wednesday.

"The thing about evil is that when it seems most triumphant, it has in it the seeds of its own destruction. Already this fundamental truth is being demonstrated in the apparently victorious regime in some states. The government has legalized what it insists is a harmless beverage, yet the wets discover to their dismay that they must keep right on trying to quiet the suspicion of the people that there is a moral stigma attached to the business of making and drinking beer."

Miss Miller Weds Mr. Brown At Garden Rites

Miss Mary Sutton Miller, daughter of the Rev. Dr. Lewis Samuel Godfrey Miller and Mrs. Miller, of Richmond, Va., became the bride of Joseph Emerson Brown, son of Mrs. Elijah Alexander Brown and the late Mr. Brown at a beautiful ceremony solemnized at 5:45 yesterday in the lovely garden encircling the River's road residence of the bridegroom's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Palmer Johnson. The Rev. Dr. Miller performed the impressive marriage service, assisted by Dr. S. H. C. Burgin, pastor of St. Mark Methodist church.

A stringed orchestra under the direction of Allen Walker was stationed on the balcony overlooking the terrace where the ceremony was performed and rendered a program of exquisite nuptial music, including Schubert's "Serenade," "On Wings of Song," by Mendelssohn, "Liebestraum," by Liszt, and "At Dawning," by Cadman. During the marriage service "Meditation" from "Thais," by Massenet, was softly played. The bridal chorus from "Lohengrin" was used as the processional and the wedding march from "Tannhauser" was the recessional.

The garden formed a picturesque setting for the marriage ceremony and the members of the wedding party were grouped on the second terrace, forming a semi-circle around the satin-covered prie-dieu, where the bride and bridegroom knelt to receive the benediction. The wedding guests assembled in the patio and flights of steps led to the central terrace where the ceremony took place. Lily pools and parterres of bright-hued flowers were effective features of the garden and a stream of crystal-clear water formed miniature falls beyond the terrace.

Wedding Personnel.

Elijah A. Brown Jr. and Marcus J. Brown, of Cincinnati, Ohio, acted as best men for their brother and the groomsmen included Joel Hurt III, of New York; Malon Courts, Oze Horton, Clarence Williamson, William Ansley, all of Atlanta, and Stewart Bell Jr., of Winchester, Va., cousin of the bride.

Miss Penelope Brown, sister of the bridegroom and maid of honor, was gowned in mint-green mousseline de soie posed over a taffeta slip of a matching tone. Her gown featured a low neckline and huge puffed sleeves with the skirt fitted over the hips, achieving a graceful flare at the knees. A taffeta sash combining yellow and green was caught at the back in a flat bow, the long ends falling to the hem of her gown. She wore a wide-brimmed organdy hat of mint green and her bouquet was of garden flowers, including yellow snapdragons, blue delphinium, pink African daisies, candytuft and roses.

The bridesmaids, Misses Sally Spalding, of Atlanta; Frances Richerson, of Bagley, Va., cousin of the bride; Sara Lane Smith, of Decatur; Betty Bonham, of Birmingham, Ala.; and Imogene Hudson, of Atlanta, wore canary yellow gowns of mousseline de soie posed over matching slips of taffeta and fashioned like the gown worn by the maid of honor. Canary yellow taffeta combined with mint green formed their sashes and they wore yellow organdy hats. They carried bouquets of pastel-shaded garden flowers similar to that of Miss Brown.

Beautiful Bride.

The beautiful young bride descended to the terrace with her uncle, Lloyd Agnew, of Charleston, S. C., by whom she was given in marriage. She was attired in a quaint, ivory-shaded

Miss Glausier, Mr. Tidmore Wed in Decatur

Emory Theological chapel was the scene of the marriage of Miss Christine Glausier, of Decatur, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Glausier, to Joseph Christopher Tidmore, of Atlanta, which was solemnized Saturday evening at 8:30 o'clock. The Rev. J. T. Robins, pastor of the East Point Methodist church, performed the double ring ceremony in the presence of friends and relatives.

Palms and ferns banked the pulpit and seven-branched candelabra holding slender white tapers flanked a central basket of stately Easter lilies and gladioli. Fewer for members of the families were marked with clusters of lilies caught with white satin ribbons.

Nuptial Music.

A program of nuptial music arranged by Mrs. Lillouise Smith Green was rendered by Miss Hazel Wood at the piano and Mendel Segal, violinist. An interesting number was the "Bride's Music," which was written by George Lindner and dedicated to Mrs. Green upon her marriage to Paul Green. Additional numbers included "Romance," by Rubinstein; "Old Retrain," by Kreisler; "Intermezzo," by Scialiti; "Serenade-Chamade," by Kreisler; and "Poeme" by Fibich. Wagner's "Lohengrin" was used for the processional and Mendelssohn's "Midsummer Night's Dream" for the recessional. "I

Powell-Murphey Wedding Takes Place at Church

Marked by dignity and simplicity, the marriage of Miss Martha Frances Powell and Edward Lee Murphey was solemnized Saturday morning at 11 o'clock at Druid Hills Methodist church. Rev. Loy Warwick, presiding elder of the Waycross district of the South Georgia Methodist conference, officiated in the presence of friends and relatives. Fragrant Easter lilies in three floor standards were placed before a background of palms and ferns at the altar and interspersed with the foliage plants were eight seven-branched candelabra holding lighted tapers. Dark-green foliage plants were banked in the choir loft and at the back of the altar.

Miss Ethel Beyers, organist of the church, presented the musical program, playing preceding the ceremony "Reve Angelique," Rubinstein; "Romance," Bonnet; "Dreams," McAmis; "Angels," Karg-Elert; "Meditation," Kister, and "Prelude to Lohengrin," by Wagner. The wedding march from Lohengrin was used, the recessional from "Midsummer Night's Dream," by Mendelssohn, and during the ceremony Miss Beyers played Schuman's "Traumerl."

Mrs. Herbert Nixon, matron of honor, and the bridesmaids, Mesdames Henry Morgan and Harry Thompson, were elegantly gowned alike in attractive models of chin chin blue crepe cut along bias lines and made with puffed elbow-length sleeves, which were tucked at the shoulders. Jabots of the same material were becoming features. The hats of natural-toned halibut were trimmed with chin chin blue ribbon and the accessories matched the hats in shade. They carried bouquets of Johanna Hill roses and blue delphinium tied with blue satin ribbon. Lyman Murphey acted as his brother's best man and the groomsmen were Henry Morgan and Harry Thompson Jr.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, James Everett Powell, was a smart figure in her traveling suit of beige crepe Rene, fashioned on tailored lines and featuring Patou's new stock neckline. The modish coat was double-breasted, with cape back and cape sleeves edged by handsome beige fox fur. Her hat was a Marie Alfonsine version of the beret type with tiny tucks around the crown caught with a brown ornament and finished with a brief brown nose veil. Her other accessories were of beige and brown. She carried a bouquet of valley lilies showered with valley lilies and tied with white satin ribbon.

Mrs. James Everett Powell, mother of the bride, was gowned in yacht blue crepe with a hat in a matching shade of blue felt and worn with a shoulder spray of Briarcliff roses. Mrs. Candier Murphey, sister of the bridegroom, wore a stylish model of aquamarine crepe with brown hat and accessories. Completing her costume was a shoulder bouquet of Talisman roses.

Following the ceremony Dr. and Mrs. Vernon Powell, brother and sister of the bride, entertained at a wedding breakfast at Brookhaven Club for members of the bridal party and immediate families. A color motif of pink and white was reflected in the decorations and the guests' places were marked by white heart-shaped boxes filled with mints and tied with white ribbon and valley lilies. Pastel-shaded flowers formed the centerpiece for the bride's table.

Mr. and Mrs. Murphey left for a wedding trip and on their return will reside with the bride's parents at their home on Fairview road.

satin gown, which had been worn by the bridegroom's aunt, the late Mrs. E. L. Connally, when, as the former Miss Mary Brown, she took her marriage vows. The gown, made 59 years ago, featured leg o' mutton sleeves, fitted bodice and graceful skirt, suggesting the mode of today.

Adorning the skirt in a panel effect were rows of puffing formed of the satin and the long train was built into the gown at the waistline.

The bride's exquisite rose point lace veil was caught to her brunette tresses by dainty sprays of orange blossoms and fell in graceful folds over the train. The veil had been worn by Mrs. Albert Anderson and Mrs. Robert Bryan, cousins of the bridegroom, when they were married and was lent to yesterday's bride by Mrs. John S. Spalding, cousin of the bridegroom. An exquisite handkerchief, belonging to Mrs. Spalding, was carried by the bride. Her slipper was of ivory crepe, she wore white kid gloves and carried an exquisite bouquet of gardenias and swansonia. Completing her wedding attire was a heart-shaped pendant studded with pearls, the gift of the bridegroom.

Following the ceremony, Dr. Miller, father of the bride, entertained at an informal reception in the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Johnson's garden. In view of the illness of Mrs. Miller, Dr. Miller was assisted in entertaining by his sister, Mrs. Lloyd Agnew, of Charleston, S. C. Assisting in receiving were the bride and bridegroom, members of the wedding party, Mrs. Elijah Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Agnew and Mr. and Mrs. Palmer Johnson. Miss Betsy Spalding, Miss Louise Steakly and Mrs. Malon Courts served punch. Miss Roselyn Johnston, of Savannah, kept the satin-covered bride's book.

Mrs. Brown, mother of the bridegroom, was crowned in gray chiffon veiling gray satin worn with a hat of gray crepe and gray accessories. She wore a shoulder spray of gardenias. Mrs. Johnston, aunt of the bridegroom, wore a handsome gown of figured chiffon in tones of raspberry and a shoulder spray of gardenias. ## Degree Conferred Upon Mrs. Fassett

Crocker Fassett, mother of Mrs. Fred Hodgson and grandmother of Mrs. Rutherford Ellis and Mrs. Edward Van Winkle Jr. This talented woman claims, too, the distinction of being the grandmother of a trio of attractive young members of Atlanta's very junior contingent, small Wingfield Ellis and Rutherford Ellis III, and Edward K. Van Winkle III.

Mrs. Fassett, who has a host of friends in the south made during her visits to her family here, was invited to attend the graduation exercises of Elmira College in Elmira, N. Y., in order that the college might confer upon this deserving person the honorary degree of Doctor of Humane Letters.

A flattering comment appears in a recent issue of the New York Times telling of the award to Mrs. Fassett, who rendered such excellent service in her adopted city of Elmira, N. Y.

The Times states as follows: "The honorary degree of Doctor of Humane Letters was conferred upon Mrs. Jennie Crocker Fassett, of Washington, widow of former Representative J. Sloat Fassett, of Elmira, and the honorary degree of Master of Arts upon Mrs. Martha P. Falsoner, of New York city, one of the foremost figures in social service in America."

"Mrs. Fassett while living in Elmira assisted in financing the met at the altar by the bridegroom and the best man, his brother, Dr. T. L. Tidmore, of Atlanta. White duchess satin fashioned the bridal gown, which was an Augusta-bernad model and was self-trimmed, with long tight-fitting sleeves. The close-fitting bodice featured the V-neckline and the long, flaring skirt from the knees to the floor formed a semi-train in the back. The exquisite real lace veil was caught with tiny clusters of orange blossoms on each side of her dark hair. The bride wore an old gold necklace, which was a gift to her mother from Mr. Glausier on their first wedding anniversary. Her bouquet was of bride's roses and valley lilies.

The groomsmen were Dr. J. W. Tidmore, of Auburn, Ala.; Dr. Warren Williams, of Tifton, Ga.; D. B. Tidmore, of Birmingham, Ala.; and Gene Nardine, of Anderson.

Bridal Reception. Following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Glausier entertained at an informal reception at their home on Sycamore street, the guests including the wedding party, relatives and out-of-town guests. Receiving with Mr. and Mrs. Glausier were the bride and bridegroom; Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Tidmore, of Moundsville, Ala., parents of the bridegroom. Mrs. Tidmore wore a gown of blue chiffon with a shoulder spray of pink roses and valley lilies.

Throughout the house were baskets of snapdragons, lilies and sweetpeas in artistic arrangement. The bride's table, which was overlaid with exquisite lace, held a crystal bowl of pink sweet peas and ferns and on either side were crystal candelabra holding white tapers. The wedding cake was embossed in sweet peas and topped with a miniature bride and bridegroom.

The out-of-town guests for the wedding were Mrs. T. J. Glausier, of Baconton, grandmother of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Ramsey, Miss Martha Ramsey and Richard Ramsey, of Augusta; Mr. and Mrs. B. N. Maigler, Lincoln, Fla.; Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Guilford, of Macon; Mr. and Mrs. J. U. McKoon, Miss Elizabeth McKoon and Robert McKoon, of Luthersville; Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Drane, Miss Ruth Drane, Joseph Drane and Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Phillips, Columbus; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Marden, Gadsden; Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Tidmore, Moundsville, Ala.; Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Tidmore, Auburn, Ala.; Mr. and Mrs. D. B. Tidmore and Mr. and Mrs. Rogers Elliott, of Birmingham.

Wedding Trip. Mr. and Mrs. Tidmore left for a motor trip to the mountains of north Georgia and upon their return will be at home with the bride's parents until fall, when they will move into their apartment on Cornell road.

For traveling the bride wore a smart dark blue ensemble of woolen adorned with a bow of ermine. Her accessories were in matching tones of blue.

York Hall Reproduced In Atlanta Home.

Atlanta as well as Virginia boasts a "York Hall" for Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Steadwell and their daughter, Miss Mary Steadwell, have recently taken possession of their handsome residence on Wieuka road, which bears the name of that famous home of colonial days. An exact copy of the original, the home is fashioned of red brick with quoins and window sills of white stone. An interesting stoop of brick is circular in effect and a brass knocker ornaments the white-pannelled door. Built in a grove of forest trees, the house is reached by a box bordered walk of flagstones while stepping stones lead to the woods beyond the house.

White pannelled walls and polished floors of wide boards create anew the influence of colonial days. Mrs. Steadwell in the selection of her furniture has chosen rare old family pieces which lend grace and dignity to the spacious home. A fireside chair of carved mahogany covered in rust-colored damask is placed beside the Georgian mantel and white china jars flank the central ornament, a Dresden China figure. A few well-chosen paintings adorn the walls, and wall brackets and central lighting borrow the prism glass pendants of early days. In the dining room the green draperies with gay little flowers repeat the color tones of quaint old china displayed in corner cupboards. And the ancestral tea pots and age-old service plates hobnob with a worn little canteen used by Miss Mary Steadwell during her service overseas.

On the second floor of York Hall are four bedrooms, each with its bath, and a wide central hall. A corner room boasts a four-poster bed of walnut covered with a handwoven bedspread, tufted in dull rose, and an interesting chest of walnut is graced by a quaint mirror framed in walnut. A bedside table is completed with old candlesticks and a Godey's book in its original binding. Handmade rag rugs fashioned by Mrs. Steadwell, repeat the color of the bedspread in its dull rose tones. Miss Steadwell's boudoir has a beautiful spool bed, graced with a hand-tufted spread, and a really lovely old desk of cherry with a secret drawer and numerous pigeon holes. A companion piece is an arm-chair with a rush seat while an array of books attest to the literary taste of the owner. Throughout the home there is a sense of dignity and spaciousness, delightfully in keeping with York Hall.

Nevitt Family Makes Interesting Trip. A trio of Atlantans including Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Nevitt and their son, Archibald Nevitt, left early the past week for Princeton, N. J., where they will attend the graduation exercises of Princeton University, at Princeton, N. J. Mr. and Mrs. Nevitt's son, Henderson Nevitt, is a member of the graduation class and will receive his diploma with his classmates. During his college days at this noted institution of learning, Mr. Nevitt has excelled in both literary and athletic fields. He is a member of the football team, is captain of the hockey team, excels in any sport, and is a popular member of the student body.

Turning southward following the commencement exercises and attendant festivities, Mr. and Mrs. Nevitt and their sons, Henderson and Archibald, will journey to Virginia to take part in the Lee tour which is clothed in special significance to the Nevitt family, in that Mr. Nevitt's grandmother was the former Miss Mary Lee, belle and beauty of the old south. The tour will include visits to the home of General Robert E. Lee, beloved Confederate chieftain, and other points of interest. Late in the summer Mr. and Mrs. Nevitt will return to Atlanta accompanied by their sons.

Numbered among the wedding gifts presented to Mr. and Mrs. Kingdon was a quaint old silver fruit bowl, once the property of the great-grandmother of the bride. Fashioned of finest silver, the bowl boasts four legs and is oblong in shape. Age has added a soft sheen to the metal and the delicate tracery of flowers and leaves which graces the sides of the bowl and ornaments the handle is of intricate pattern. The ancestral piece will add a distinctive note to the new home of Mr. and Mrs. Kingdon in Nashville and will be treasured by the bride and bridegroom for its beauty as well as for its sentimental value.

Mrs. Crown To Visit European Gardens.

Seeking inspiration in her chosen field of horticulture in the beautiful gardens across the sea, Mrs. Fletcher Pearson Crown sets sail early in July for European countries. Sailing from New York to Southampton, she has planned an interesting tour of the beauty spots of England, Denmark, Finland, Germany, Czechoslovakia, Austria, Switzerland and France. She will visit famous professional gardens and will view interesting plant life with the eyes of an authority. Monsieur Correvon's estate at Floraine, near Geneva, will be a highlight of her trip and she will include in her itinerary trips to the arboretum and plant laboratories of the firm of de Vilmorin, noted for its marvelous collection of plants. Versailles and the famous rose gardens of Monsieur Georges Truffant have been included in her plans.

Each country will offer its finest gardens and each has some very special appeal for the Atlantian. Upon her arrival in New York she will join a party of horticulturists and will make a tour of handsome Long Island estates, gaining a renewed interest in plant life. In late June Mrs. Crown will visit her sister, Mrs. Lula Pearson, at her attractive home in Norfolk, Va., and will prove the inspiration for a number of social courtesies.

Representative Young Georgians Head Children of Confederacy

By Mrs. L. W. GREENE,
Of Syracuse, State Editor.

Included in the ranks of officers of the Children of the Confederacy are a group of most representative youthful Georgians. Isabelle Allen, of Social Circle, first vice president, is the lovely young granddaughter of Mrs. E. C. McDowell, U. S. C. state chairman of relics; Mary Kate Hudson, treasurer, is the daughter of Mrs. W. Guy Hudson, a member of the Agnes Lee U. S. C. chapter, of Danville; Virginia Bell, editor, is the daughter of Mrs. Harry Bell, of the Elberton chapter, U. S. C., and Mary Mulline, of Montezuma, is the daughter of Mrs. F. M. Mulline, president of the Phil Cook chapter, U. S. C. The capable manner in which this group is assuming U. S. C. responsibilities at such an early age seems to forecast the splendid U. S. C. leaders they will be in the future.

Misses Sara Slade, Julia Homer Wilson and Mesdames J. W. Slade, J. C. Wilson and H. P. Powell, were hostesses to a meeting of the Boynton chapter of Griffin held at the Memorial clubhouse, with Mrs. Robert Walker, president, presiding. Rev. Paul Watson, pastor of the Presbyterian church, opened the meeting with prayer and gave an address on Georgia history. Mrs. Walker reported for a rummage sale to be held and appointed Mesdames C. B. Thomas and Willis Banks to serve with her on the clubhouse corporation for another year. Mesdames J. C. Wilson, Homer Gossett, Lewis Jordan, Collier Helms and W. E. H. Searcy gave official reports and Miss Julia Homer Wilson, director of the Children of the Confederacy, told of plans for beautifying a plot of ground next to the soldiers' cemetery on the new highway, to be called Stonewall park. This plot was located on U. S. C. C. and will be put in charge of a landscape gardener for beautification. Miss Geraldine Purdy gave a piano solo and Miss Carrie Eaves, U. S. C. C., on Jefferson Davis and read the beautiful tribute written by Judge James S. Boynton to the president of the Confederacy, in commemoration of his birthday. Boynton chapter, U. S. C., is named for Judge Boynton.

At a recent meeting of the Mary Ann Williams chapter, of Sandersville, Mrs. J. J. Harris was elected president for the next year and at the same meeting Mrs. Harris and the other new officers will be installed in the Memory Garden of Mrs. Harris, which was made possible by the thoughtful contribution of flowers by the chapters and members of the Georgia Division.

Tommy Guesses and Misses
At the Masquerade Ball

SUNDAY, JUNE 18, 1933

Trade Mark Registration Applied for

1 AT THE fancy dress ball Teddy Thomas, the shoe clerk who is playing millionaire on his two-week summer vacation at doggy Marmaduke Springs, is conversing with a masked siren, garbed like the devastatingly beautiful queen of a sultan's palace. Tommy himself looks pretty grand. "Is oo fooling poor little me?" lisps the lady. "No," Tommy tells himself quickly. "It is not she." Tommy came to the fashionable resort with the subconscious hope that he would meet and marry an heiress. Instead, he has fallen terribly in love with Jeanne, the humble girl at the cigar counter. He has been looking for her at the ball, hoping she would come as she promised. Something about the harem queen reminded him of Jeanne but the moment the lady lisped he knew it was not the miss who already owned his heart.

3 TWELVE o'clock and is Tommy's face red! The pirate wasn't Jeanne, after all. The adorable little girl from the hotel counter is dressed in crinoline and old lace. She has garbed herself like an aristocratic Southern lady of the pre-Civil War days. "Darling!" exclaims the astonished Tommy. "Darling?" repeats Jeanne. "What makes you think I am your darling? You didn't glance at me all evening!" (To be Continued)

2 TOMMY has stolen away from the beauty in the scanty Oriental costume and here we see him gliding about the polished floor with a feminine pirate whose youthful loveliness and grace would have softened the heart of even the wicked and ferocious Captain Kidd. Now he is sure she is Jeanne. The charming way she holds her head, the half-open lips, the expression about her kissable mouth, convinces him. But he will soon find out. Twelve o'clock is approaching, the hour when all must unmask. Meanwhile he is contented to just waltz around with the pretty buccaneer. He whispers tender words to the make-believe marauder of the high seas. She answers him only with sighs and the subtlest of smiles. And then—

Old Lines

HERE it is, mid-June again—and the only reason I can think of to explain why, "What is so rare as a day in June?" is a famous line is that when it was written there was nothing so rare as a famous line. There being only 30 days in June and 31 in some of the other moons, I suppose a June day has to be rarer than one in May or July. But—look at a day in February!

So many bromides written long ago have become classics, whereas if they bobbed up in this column today—the very same lines—they wouldn't get a tumble. The world used to take any statement beyond, "How do you feel this morning?" as an inspired visitation, and such hokum as, "Life is real, life is earnest," was passed along and mulled over, and our simple forebears shook their heads and said, "How true, how true!"

Fancy a few of the following—released for the first time in 1933—being household and copybook quotations (classics, all) in 2033:

The shrine of each patriot's devotion, the world offers homage to thee.

'Twas a balmy Summer evening and a goodly crowd was there—

Alas for maiden, alas for judge, for rich retainer and household drudge. And they lived happily ever after.

The boy stood on the burning deck whence all but him had fled. In the bright lexicon of youth there is no such word as "fall!"

He looks the whole world in the face, for he odes not any man. —whose heart within him ne'er has burned as home his footsteps he has turned from wandering on a foreign strand?

There is no place like home. You wouldn't dare insult me, sir, if Jack were only here.

Tell the truth and shame the devil, Murder will out!

(That last one is a honey.) And all these and a million more have come through the years and will go down through the ages.

Can you think of ONE line written within the last twenty years that you remember? Sure none that your children's children will repeat—except maybe, "I do not choose to run." Not even "Was you dere, Sharlie?"

forgot to take up madamoney among the several subjects he juggled whilst driving Diana home to my native Astoria.

I thought sure when he beheld the pickcher of married bliss on the dumm pan of his brother-in-law, who sat in his sockfeet smoking an old pipe and yawning, Michael would order up a dish of that for himself.

But all he says after we left, after my pet dress was all gooeey from loll-pops which befreckled demons smeared all over me, after I was wore out playing being overwelmt with the delights of home life and payrenthood, he says a stine of 3-dismal-2 wouldn't go bad and we repared to a druggist-store and downed us a few. By that time the spell if any had avaporated and he was back good-timing me as yoususual.

I had kind of pinned my hopes on that visit to his married sister's but I guess the pin slipt. I thought that kind of man if he would take a girl to his married sister's in the first place his intentions was cereous. I know that was what happened when my sister Minerva was first taken by her fireman to meet his famly. The famly didn't think much of Min but the first thing we all knew what was she but a bride-to-be and now she is got two kids and her husband works steady and if he should kick off she pulls down a pen-sun for life.

So I thought I had the right to expect the same deal but what I got was some beer. Well, bless our President and the men in Congress or I wouldnt of even got that. I tried not to regastor disappointment. Aha—I was the light-hearted gazel, everything was hotche and wact it a gorgeous day! But down in side I had a hollow void what no amount of beer could plug up.

Well, its been a hard week in between waitressing in that B'way eat-it-and-beat-it and lean pickings mostly becus you know what things is now in the theatrical line. I aint exactly on Morgans pafferred list if you know what I mean altho I didnt pay no income tax in 31 or 32 neither. With pop unemployed again or yet you fight as well say and Min never kicking in a thin dime toards the upkeep its scrab-beling for Diana. So insted of a new hat for tomorror when I meet Michael onet more I'll be girlishish and very summary and just go bear-hedded if he is as fed up looking at that lavender lid I been waring as I am he will rather gaze on my awburn lox.

Theirfour, as I started out to record, since last I confided in you life has been a bust and a perfect 36 one at that by which I mean nothing small.

Well, tomorrows another day and who knows what it may bring, huh? Tomorror I take Michael to MY sister's dummyle and maybe that'll just oprate okay. Maybe becus my brother-in-law is working and his aint that might create a different admosphere altogether. The jern might bite him then and their. I've gave up being two hopefull. Let what comes come. I'm tired.

I dont have to tell YOU what it all means to ME. But what can I do? If ever a jane was on the job like I been to charm one man evry opperehunity possible she done all one youman woman can. That and pray. Maybe some more praying might do something. So, good night, diary... You pray, too. (To Be Continued.)

Idiosyncrazies—

Being "on the wagon" is rather fashionable these nights along the Hardened Artery. Gin and hooch, somehow, lost their appeal with the advent of beer, whether or not the ex-highballers go for the 3.2. There used to be a kick in ordering up the gin and feeling brave, big and defiant. But now when one (or more) can get beer anywhere, there isn't much left to defy. Bet I know a full half-hundred boys and girls who never recanted in the pre-beer period who now wouldn't think of totting or ordering hard stuff. If you'll glance Northwest you can look up at one of them—under the straw halo.

Bernard Sobel, who used to be the Ziegfeld publicity star, and who writes different dramatic material for the Mirror, is one grand pal. He knows that, secretly, I soldier on my theatre-going. So he checks up on me. And if a good show is about to close, he sneaks up on Lait and says, "I found you haven't seen that one. And you should—you mustn't miss it. So I've had seats laid aside for you for every performance between tonight and the end of the run. Now, you make up your mind which night you'll go—so I can release the rest of the tickets"... What can you do with a guy like that?

Now that they've told Roxy he can't take his name with him to his new theatre, he sees it on the old one a block away and doesn't know whether to be pleased at seeing his name in lights or sore because they're the other fellow's lights. They continue to keep the name advertised but the advertising is of no particular use to him right now, and is a drag-in for the opposish.

It's an unprecedented theatrical situation. Usually new owners can't get the old name—no matter how much it's worth—down fast enough... and put their own up.

When the Nazis Scowled at Glamorous Gitta, Her Loyal Husband Left Them Flat and Flew to Her

WHEN Chancellor Adolph Hitler launched his anti-Semitic campaign "to make Germany safe for the Germans," he brought the eyes of the world upon him most effectively. It became apparent early in his administration that his drive against the Jews was one of the main planks in his platform.

Jewish citizens of the world, and particularly those in the large cities of the United States, flocked to giant protest meetings, planned trade boycotts and cabled bitter invectives across the waters to Berlin. Thousands of Jews and Gentiles alike were aroused, although there were other thousands who voiced favor for Hitler's theories.

The fiery chancellor announced that one of his first moves would be to make sure that only the writings, the paintings and the acting of pure Nordics would be available to the German public. It was in connection with his efforts along this line that one of the most dramatic events occurred.

Gitta Alpar, the famous blonde soprano, who, at the height of her popularity on the Berlin stage had married Gustav Froehlich, the German matinee idol, staked her lovely charms and affections against Herr Hitler's great power—and won! She got a big hand and much of the applause came right from the heart of the German capital.

Had Gustav Froehlich, acknowledged to be Germany's foremost leading man, had less love for his wife and less character and had Gitta Alpar possessed less beauty and less ability, the story might have been far different. As it is, the tale will go down among the idylls of our times to prove again that love DOES reign supreme.

The stage was set a few weeks ago when Cabinet Minister Josef Goebbels, formidable director of Nazi propaganda, was assigned to eliminate all but "pure-blooded" Germans from the motion picture industry. His first tactical move was to invite the leading actors and executives to an elaborate reception.

THE DRAMA'S "VILLAIN"

"Very well," said Gustav. "I am under contract. But if my wife is prevented from playing opposite me, you must find a partner who is her equal in all things—voice, looks, acting ability, personality, magnetism."

Then began a frantic hunt for a female lead good enough for Gustav. The supply of film stars had been seriously depleted by the new Nazi regulations.

In the meantime, Gitta, in Budapest with her parents, was nearly crying her pretty eyes out. Gustav, she knew, was undergoing dreadful loneliness in Berlin. And she was well aware of the pressure that would be brought to bear in an effort to force him to denounce her.

Did Gustav care enough for her to brave the Chancellor's displeasure? ... Gustav always had the loveliest women at his feet, and now, with everybody nagging him, would he weaken? ... She would not blame Gustav if he gave in and agreed to divorce her. ... But no! He mustn't do that. ... She couldn't let him. ... She must fly to his side. ... But she couldn't. ... She was banned. ...

So ran Gitta's thoughts. She was rapidly approaching a nervous breakdown when a messenger tapped at her door with a telegram. She tore it open and read: "Meet me at the frontier, arrive by midnight express, Gustav."

Gitta's joy knew no limits. She was so excited she could hardly control herself, but she managed to get to the frontier in time to meet the express. When Gustav stepped from the train their embrace was so prolonged it brought applause and laughter from the trainmen. Finally Gustav released Gitta and told her:

"They could find no one to take your place. I just walked out and left them and I'll go back just whenever I like. We'll divorce each other just when WE like, won't we, darling, and not when Adolph Hitler chooses!"

Gitta and Gustav hastened to her parent's villa where they went into seclusion. It was like a second honeymoon and their legions of friends and well-wishers insisted that never were they so happy together.

So love chalked up another victory. Gustav and Gitta are contracted to make pictures together in other countries, and Gustav may never return to Berlin.

So much for the anti-Semitic edict of the be-swastikaed "Schoene Adolph."

Where Did Playing Cards Come From?

By W. Kent Jenkins

THE origin of one of our most popular pastimes—card playing—remains obscure to the most thorough investigators of the past. Some have traced its beginnings to China, others to India, others to Egypt, and still others to Arabia.

In a Chinese dictionary which was compiled in 1678 it is stated that cards were invented in A. D. 1120 during the reign of a Chinese monarch Suen-ho, but there is a widespread tradition that the pastime was known in India even before this. It has been asserted that the game was invented by the Brahmins. Some very ancient Indian cards, round in form, have been discovered and placed in museums. It is said cards had a religious significance to the early Egyptians.

The time and manner of the introduction of cards into Europe has aroused as much dispute as the time and place of origin. According to one theory, they were introduced into Italy by Arabian traders; according to another, the Moors brought them to Spain from Africa; according to a third theory, the Crusaders brought them back from Palestine.

It is believed cards were used to a limited extent in Europe by the middle of the fourteenth century, but did not come into general use until the early fifteenth century. Petrarch, Boccaccio, and Chaucer make no mention of cards, although they refer to many other games. In fifteenth century documents, however, there are numerous allusions to the game.

The first reference to the introduction of cards into the new world occurs in a letter from Herrera, a companion of Cortez, who described Early German cards, showing the suits, hearts, bells, leaves, and acorns. The Germans were the first Europeans to manufacture cards on a commercial basis, exporting them to neighboring countries. The earliest cards were hand painted; later they were printed from wood blocks.

Below: Cards used in colonial America for transmitting invitations to social events. The invitations were engraved or printed on the backs of the cards, as shown at the lower right of this group.

Cards believed to have been used by Charles VII. of France in the first half of the 15th century.

In America the knave is generally known as the jack. Cards have been put to a great variety of uses throughout the world. Many different games have been developed in the course of centuries and the cards have been adapted to functions other than direct amusement. In colonial America invitations to social events sometimes were engraved upon the backs of playing cards. Gypsies probably started the practice of using cards for fortune telling. Card playing, the origin of which is so obscure, has grown in popularity with the passing of the interest with which the Aztecs followed the card games of the Spanish soldiers.

Early in the fifteenth century the manufacture of cards became a recognized trade in Germany. They were exported to other countries. Their production began in Italy about Italian cards of the four suits, swords, bats, money, and cups.

From sources of this nature it has been learned that the popularity of the game gained a great impetus upon being taken up by European royalty. Once the kings and queens began playing, the game quickly became a favorite pastime of the people.

The earliest European cards, such as those with which Charles VI. of France was accustomed to amuse himself, were hand painted, but subsequently they were printed from wood blocks.

It has not been established whether the earliest decks were of the type generally used at present. Authorities agree that they might have been "tarot" decks, a style which still is found occasionally in Germany, France, and Italy. A tarot deck consists of 78 cards. There are four suits, each made up of 14 cards, and an additional 22 emblematic cards.

The four suits of the early German cards consisted of hearts, bells, leaves, and acorns. In the fifteenth century the Italians adopted four other suits—swords, bats, money, and cups. The French cards of the 15th century were divided into the four suits which still are in use in France—carre, treffe, pique, and carreau. The suits used in American and English decks—hearts, clubs, spades, and diamonds—are derived directly from the French.

In the latter part of the 15th century manufacturers began experimenting with many novelties. For suit marks they used animals, flowers, human figures, and other decorations; but none of these innovations came into general use.

The so-called court cards of the early decks were the king, chevalier, and knave. It is believed the Italians were the first to substitute the queen for the chevalier. In the French deck also the queen occupied the place of the chevalier at an early date.

Co-eds, Demanding Liberty, Spurn "Irregular" Marriages in a Season

PROFESSOR'S NIGHTMARE!
Miss Marguerite Atteberry, Pretty Kansas City Co-ed, Shows How Young Girl Graduates SHOULD Dress on These Hot June Days When They Must Wear Their Sombre Caps and Gowns. Maybe This Will Be a New Fad.

Copyright, 1938

SNAIRING a husband, running a home and raising youngsters is the life purpose of college girls, just as it is of their sisters who do not go in for fancy education. They may study the art of ancient Greece, or the literary style of Chaucer, but they are particularly interested, like all women, in learning how to plan the kind of a dinner hubby likes, or what to do when little Johnnie gets the croup.

Consider the peppy little co-ed who, perhaps, leaps up on a desk and delivers a stirring speech to arouse her fellow students to strike against faculty censorship of their morals. Or consider the college girl who sits around with a cigarette in one hand and a highball glass in the other and argues the advantages of "modern thought."

You'll find that these girls are quick to take up the cudgels of all womankind and fight to the last ditch for such "old fashioned" things as the sanctity of marriage, or the safety of the home. Indeed, college girls, beneath all their frivolity, are sober minded young women much like their sisters everywhere.

Can this be proven? Yes—by reading the answers to marriage questionnaires circulated so freely among girl students throughout the country.

It is common practice for classes in psychology and sociology to gather co-ed reaction to companionate and trial marriages, easy divorce, whether the girls prefer a career or marriage, single and double moral standards, and so on. Answers to these and similar questions prove the point without a doubt.

This is one of the interesting contrasts in the uprisings which have been apparent on campuses from coast to coast in the last few months. This report is one of a series compiled from the findings of more than thirty reporters who were assigned to study student revolts in as many different states. In another chapter many more astounding campus events will be described.

Of the hundreds of marriage questionnaires circulated among women students, perhaps as typical as any college girl thought was the one at Bryn Mawr, exclusive girls' school, near Philadelphia. The answers may be accepted as typical of the opinion of the modern girl of culture and class.

Probably the question and answer most widely discussed had to do with "controlled companionate" marriage. The questionnaire defined it as "legal marriage entered into with a view to permanence but with knowledge of birth control and with acceptance of divorce by mutual consent where there were no children."

Fifty-five per cent of the girls voted in favor of it which, after all, the girls explained, is just about what every marriage is today, anyway. But trial marriage, aha, that was different. This, the girls apparently thought, wouldn't give women the security they hold so highly; it wouldn't provide safety for women and their children.

Trial marriage was defined as "legal marriage entered into tentatively with a view to breaking it off later if it fails to bring satisfaction." Only nine per cent of the girls voted that they would accept it.

THEY CALL IT "SCHOOL SPIRIT"

Freshmen and Sophomores Are Traditional Campus Enemies. This Is Just a Friendly Little Book Rush Which Is Part of the Class Day Games at Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

The question answered affirmatively by the largest number of girls came as a great surprise. Remember, the girls voting presumably were attending college to fit themselves for careers. The question was: "If married, would you sacrifice career for marriage in case of conflict?" Ninety-four per cent of the girls answered that they would.

And, what was just as startling; 83 per cent of the girls answered that they preferred marriage to a career anyway. What more could you ask to prove that college girls have the same ideas about life as all women?

Seventy-nine per cent of the girls said they believed in the same standards of morals for husband and wife. Eighty-nine per cent said they

"Why do you ask me that?" I inquired. "Aren't you starting backward?" Chita set her so white teeth in the mango's yellow pulp and took a bite which didn't violate a single point of etiquette. Then she answered me:

"I just thought that if you ever do, or ever should want one, I'd advise you to go to one of the towns on our side of the border. That's what I'm going to do."

"You don't mean to tell me—"

"No, no, no! She looked at me this time and held out a slim finger to show it bore no wedding ring. "I only meant if I ever need one." And, at that, my startled heart went back into place.

"Tell me about it," I said, realizing that my delightful guide was leading me once more. "I'd like to be prepared, you know."

Chita put down the adroitly gnawed seed of her mango, permitted me to light a cigarette for her and proceeded to enlighten me.

"First of all, you must know," she said, "that a little more than a year ago the State of Chihuahua passed a law which makes divorce possible in twenty-four hours. Think of that! And residence in the State isn't required, either. That's rather putting Reno's, what you call, nose out of joint, yes?"

I agreed that this was certainly "showing 'em something" and added, facetiously, "Go on, my dear, your story strangely interests me."

"You Americans have been ever so quick to take advantage of it, too," she continued. "Indeed, amigo Rojo, as many as thirty divorces have been granted down here in one court in one hour. How's that? Last year 1,400 previously so happy couples were divorced in Chihuahua, and the Federal Government, the State and the various cities where decrees were granted were $300,000 the richer for it. Big business, as you say, yes?

I asked Chita to tell me the current rates for this wholesale, job-lot sort of procedure.

"Well, it all depends upon the prominence of the persons involved," she replied. "If you're high up in the world you pay a fancy price. The court costs are $80. Attorneys make an average charge of $200 in the towns along the border or near it, such as Juarez, of course; and Baucha Mesa, Candelara, Pillares and Samalayuca. But when a big movie star wants things done, the fee goes up to $2,500, or even more."

It was explained by my damask-cheeked Mexican guide to border practices that El Paso in Texas, was the place to which American were hastening to have their marital chain removed from them after a little excursion thence to Chihuahua's hospitable soil. "From El Paso they spread out across the line to any one of half a dozen places for the operation," Chita said.

An instant later Chita began to giggle. The reason wasn't at all clear to me, so I knew it was something in the droll little brain of hers. I couldn't avoid smiling myself because she's the only girl I know who's lovely when she giggles. "Now, now; what's it all about?" I asked. "Share it, carissima!" (I call her that sometimes).

"I was just thinking how quaint some of you American are," was her rejoinder. "It's about this divorce thing. And this is a true story, too. There were four of them Mr. and Mrs. Who and Mr. and Mrs. What. Those aren't

Every June, Princeton University Seniors Have Adorned Themselves in White Canvas "Beer Suits." The Young Men Below Are on Their Way to Try Some "Three-Two."

"HEAR YE! HEAR YE!"
"Consider the peppy little co-ed who leaps up on a desk and delivers a stirring speech to arouse her fellow students to strike against faculty censorship of morals. You'll find she will take up the cudgels of all womankind and fight to the last ditch for such old-fashioned things as the sanctity of marriage or the safety of the home."—Drawing by George Kerr.

Marriage in itself has been the focal point of much controversy on college campuses. There have been repeated rumblings and, in some cases, editorial campaigns in student newspapers against rules prohibiting students from marrying. Such rules are enforced in many colleges. Some institutions make marriage ipso facto cause for dismissal.

A sample of the marriage ban regulations is taken from the manual of rules at Syracuse University, Syracuse, N. Y. It reads:

"Student marriages, without special permission, at any time from the opening of the university in the summer until its close in June, shall cancel registration and separate the student from the university. Secret marriage at any time between matriculation and graduation will cancel registration and separate the student from the university."

While many colleges have similar rules, on the other hand, they encourage the intermingling of men and women students, with, of course, ultimate marriage always in mind. Again taking Syracuse University for an example, a movement recently was initiated by the Women's Council there looking toward the establishment of a fraternity-sorority house to facilitate "dating." The women advocated a sort of get-together house so that the two sexes could get easier acquainted.

This "Give Cupid a Hand" feeling is common on many campuses. Newspapers not long ago printed stories of the existence of a "Date Bureau" which had for a purpose the supplying of Barnard girl "dates" for Columbia men, and vice versa. Campuses of the two institutions are in New York City. It has been reported since that the bureau functioned perfectly, often providing 30 or 40 "dates" per evening.

In taking up the question of marriage and marriage questionnaires, the reporters made a thorough survey of conditions at the universities in the State of Utah, famous as the home of the Mormons, and their many wives. Strangely enough, it was found at the Utah State Agricultural College, for example, that companionate marriage and "dating" bureaus were subjects never discussed.

The reporter interviewed Dr. Elmer G. Peterson, president of the college, and gleaned from him, however, a statement which must bear deep consideration in a survey of this kind. In discussing smoking among women students, Dr. Peterson said:

"There is no problem of feminine smoking at this institution. Women who smoke, and if the practice is known, are not permitted to remain in the college. In the next breath, Dr. Peterson said: 'It may be that we are singularly free from the more depressing aspect of the so-called modern freedom. Certainly it has never been necessary here to impose either a severe censorship of any kind, or to deal on any general basis with anything like wholesale moral violations.'"

Students who long since fought for and won the right to smoke at most colleges look askance at Utah when they try to reconcile the ban on women's smoking with the statement it has never been necessary "to impose a severe censorship of any kind."

Before leaving the subject of student marriages, it might be interesting to take up the tragedy which befell a pretty young University of Wisconsin co-ed, and the young man she had planned to marry.

The boy, Lyman Schley, it developed, had been operating a student patronized road house speakeasy, not far from the seat of the state university. He had become a campus bootlegger, he said to earn money to pay for an education.

Marie C. McCarthy, attractive 18-year-old Sophomore student at the university, was in love with Schley. She made frequent visits to his road house. Before daybreak one morning, Schley staggered into a police station with the fire-charred, lifeless body of Marie in his arms.

He said the girl had visited him at the road house, and some time after midnight, they fell asleep. A burning cigarette ignited the place, and it was a flaming inferno before he awakened. Schley was seriously burned, and the road house destroyed.

NEXT WEEK—Exclusive details of the automobile bans on many campuses to prevent student petting and the ingenious ways the students "get around" the rules.

"They consulted an El Paso lawyer and he hurried to Juarez and filed suits for Mrs. Who and Mrs. What against their husbands. You know, El Paso lawyers are permitted to practice in Juarez. Not one of the four clients had to set foot on Mexican soil! They remained snugly at home, waiting."

"The two divorces were granted the same day and the El Paso lawyer rushed the decrees to his clients by air mail. When they arrived, the now broken-up quartette reassembled, went to an adjoining State in your delightful America and there went through a double wedding ceremony."

Justice for Liquor Smugglers' King

By PETER LEVINS.

Al Lillien, as related in the first part of this story last week, was sitting on top of the liquor smuggling world in the spring of 1929, when a government radio inspector intercepted the first clue to the so-called Lillien empire.

Last week's installment told how Lillien, a frugal, humorless little immigrant with a flair for big business, worked his way upward in the ranks of prohibition beneficiaries. His crowning achievement was the formation of what amounted to a liquor smuggling monopoly. This organization, which owned mother ships, swift contact boats, fleets of trucks, a radio transmitting station and quite a few officials in high and low places, operated with practically complete immunity, so well had Al and his subordinates thought out every detail. The federal government knew what was going on, but it needed evidence—legal evidence.

ON THE night of March 30, 1929, Forest F. Redfern, assistant radio inspector of the radio division, United States department of commerce, was tuning in over a range of about 3,500 to 6,000 kilocycles, at a radio set in his home on Hull street, Brooklyn. He was searching for stations that were working in private code with false call letters; that is, call letters not licensed for any station, not recognizable as legal calls in legal traffic.

(Needless to say, all radio transmitting stations must be licensed by the government and must have a definite call number sanctioned by the department of commerce.)

Redfern was thus engaged at 10:40 that night when he picked up the signal 4 RD. This was over a wave length of 3,900 kilocycles, or about 72 meters—what is known as the medium wave length zone. The radio inspector checked his charts, saw that this was an unlicensed signal, and a moment later he copied down the following message in a private code:

"CHECK 30GLVW OMSIC OB-WOK ARK."

Redfern kept his set tuned at 3,900 kilocycles. Fifteen minutes later he intercepted his second message—

"RRR DK AS AS HR CHECK 3 MUFRA CAKIK OBYMU ARK."

Other messages followed at intervals and Redfern transcribed them. They were, of course, unintelligible to him. He knew that AS meant "Wait a minute" in international code and that HR probably meant "hour," but beyond that he could make no sense out of the messages.

He knew, too, that the messages were being sent by hand and not by an automatic transmitter. And after a few more nights he was able to discern certain peculiarities of the unknown operator. (Just as in handwriting, every radio operator has individual peculiarities which in time become discernible to an expert.) For instance, sometimes the operator would make VT when he intended to make the number 4.

Most significant to Redfern was the operator's habit, when he was pausing, of making two dots, two dots and two dots, pause, which is a period. This is a distinctly Canadian habit. Not that the operator was a Canadian, necessarily, but that he had learned radio transmission in Canada. Like every individual, every nation has its radio peculiarities.

Several weeks passed. Redfern and his associates continued to transcribe the messages. (More than 600 were intercepted, but the actual de-coding began long before they had that many.)

Before long the listeners noticed that at certain periods of the day certain more or less stereotyped messages would come through. For instance, there would be the message "ANY OGLAR." The radio sleuth deduced in time that "OGLAR" meant "orders," or "instructions."

Redfern began his attempts to translate the code words in April, but it was not until June that he was able to make any headway.

The radio sleuth foiled over his lists for weeks. He consulted the foremost code experts in the country. Every two weeks he revised the list, eliminating errors. Each new word correctly translated naturally made the succeeding word easier.

Early in his researches he realized that the smugglers had to use numbers to designate hours of the day, quantities of liquor, etc. He had no clue to the code words for any of the numbers until one day a liquor boat at sea used the word "tube" and then four code words after it. Redfern guessed that the boat was asking for a type 201A receiving tube, and thus he had code words for three numbers.

Again he knew that the land and sea forces of the syndicate were keeping each other informed upon the movements of coast guard ships. (The usual practice was to send out decoy boats to lure the coast guard away from the scene of operations.) Redfern checked up with the coast guard, learning just where certain vessels bearing numbers—such as CG 216, for instance—were on certain nights. Then he checked up on the messages. In this manner he learned the code words for more numbers.

Eventually, through this process of trial and error, he knew that one word meant "cases," another meant "boats," another meant "sent," etc.

One can imagine his excitement when the moment arrived that he was able to translate that first message into—

"ANOTHER ONE LEFT."

And that second message into—

"HOW MANY CASES LOAD-ED?"

Meanwhile the government agents, including Carlos M. Bernstein, a special agent of the department of justice, had begun their long effort to locate the illegal station.

Using the most delicate instruments yet invented for tracing a radio transmitter through its own signals, Redfern took immediate bearings from points all over the metropolitan district. He traveled about Long Island and New Jersey in an automobile, and courses up and down the coast in coast guard vessels. His chief instrument in this work, of course, was a radio direction finder.

One night in August, 1929, Redfern was aboard a coast guard vessel in the East river, near Execution Light, when he intercepted some messages which appeared to come from the south. He judged that they came from somewhere in the vicinity of Red Bank, N. J., or Atlantic Highlands, New Jersey.

When the illegal station resumed operations on the night of August 26, Redfern was aboard a coast guard vessel off Tottenville, at the southern end of Staten Island. This time the messages came through very strongly, and the direction finder again indicated that they were being sent from the Highlands section of New Jersey. The boat shifted to Sandy Hook, and now the signals were so powerful—so close, in other words—that they paralyzed the receiving tubes of the set Redfern was using.

On the night of the 27th Redfern and Bernstein cruised around that section in an automobile equipped with a receiving set. The next afternoon the two sleuths, in the course of an observation tour of Highlands, noticed something about a cottage on Shrewsbury avenue—No. 33. They observed that two windows on the top floor were covered with cardboard. The cottage was in the very center of the zone Redfern had decided must contain the illegal station.

That evening found the two parked close by the cottage. Their car was equipped with a receiving set which would respond only to signals transmitted from a distance of no more than 100 feet. Two automobiles were parked in front of the dwelling, another car was in the garage at the rear. A man and woman moved about the kitchen. The top floor was dark.

Then, at 10 p. m., a light appeared in the room on the top floor. A moment later the two agents saw the lights of two radio tubes, and the loop of the small set in the car swung around and pointed directly at the house. Redfern, listening, copied down the signal—"4 RD."

They had reached their goal at last.

And so they raided the place? By no means. The government does not work that way. The plan was to make a complete clean-up, track down not only the radio station and its operator, but the whole vast syndicate of which this radio station was but a detail.

Redfern and Bernstein drove back to New York. Several days later they returned to Highlands and rented a cottage near No. 33 Shrewsbury avenue. More messages were intercepted. Later Officer Alfred J. Wing tapped the telephone wire leading into the cottage. The first message was an incoming call—

"Hello, Mac. This is Jimmy. Is he going to make it?"

"Yes, about 10 or 11."

"When are you going to talk to him?"

"In about half an hour."

"Call me at home, Mac, when you hear from him."

Later some one at the cottage called "Highland 1018" and talked with a superior. Investigation showed that this was the number of the former Oscar Hammerstein mansion in Middletown Township, adjoining Highlands. This estate, which overlooked the ocean, was apparently the headquarters of the syndicate. In other words, the long sought capital of Al Lillien's empire.

Another wire tapping job and the agents were listening in on all calls to "The Mansion," as it was called. When the Albion-Tuxedo hotel on the waterfront became involved, that wire, too, was tapped.

Thus the federal government, in its usual thorough manner, gathered its great mass of evidence. And the climax came at 4:30 p. m. October 16, 1929, when 130 officers simultaneously raided 34 places in two states, arrested 40 persons, seized boats, trucks, liquor, headquarters and radio station.

Redfern and his associates broke into the cottage as Malcolm Mac-

Master sat at the transmitter. Redfern took over the job, got in touch with a rum ship on the way down from Canada, and guided it nicely into the hands of the coast guard.

The mansion yielded a rich store of evidence in the form of account books, pay roll lists, code books, order books and other valuable data. It developed later that Mac-keeping of the syndicate when the frugal Al decided that the radio operator didn't have enough to do.

Master had taken over the book-

Solution of Last Week's Puzzle.

Under the direction of Joseph A. Frayne, assistant special agent in charge of the case, all sorts of bank accounts were traced to the syndicate. Lillien himself had several accounts. According to the syndicate's own figures, they banked more than $2,000,000 in six months of 1929, and it was estimated that the combine had done a gross business of $45,000,000 since its inception.

In one month alone (March, 1929) the syndicate paid out $700,000 for "ships, merchandising and operating expenses."

"Graft sometimes reached $30,000 a week."

The two Lilliens and some 50 others were indicted on charges of conspiring to violate the national prohibition act. Redfern meanwhile continued with his investigations, with the result that late in September, 1930, he located an illegal station in Cone Island, operated by Malcolm MacMaster, then at liberty on $30,000 bail.

The trial of Al Lillien and 36 others—the remaining indictments having been dismissed—opened on June 22, 1931, in Newark before Federal Judge J. Lyles Glenn. Philip Porman, United States attorney, was prosecutor, and the defense was headed by Frederic M. P. Pearce.

The proceedings ran along for weeks. Frequently not all the defendants would attend. After 2,780 pages of testimony, the case went to the jury.

The verdict was not guilty.

Later all other charges against Al and his boys were nolle prossed. It was contended that the government had not obtained its evidence in a nice way. Wasn't sporting, you know, to tap wires.

Thus, matters returned to the status quo, except that Al had spent a painful amount of money. (Wall Street also gave him quite a shellacking.) Smuggling operations were resumed—they had never ceased, as a matter of fact—and now the syndicate's radio station was mounted in an automobile truck which kept moving.

The optimistic government decided to try again early this year, when the two Lilliens, Jimmy Murphy and Charlie. (King) Solomon, the Boston racket magnate, were indicted for conspiracy to violate the liquor and radio laws. Solomon was eliminated as a possible defendant on January 24, when he was shot to death by a person or persons unknown, and Al Lillien—

There have been various theories about what led up to the sudden end of the little immigrant who prospered so wonderfully in the new land. The favorite theory is the usual one in such cases: that a rival mob had decided to muscle in, that Lillien retaliated, etc. It is known that Al was kidnapped last year and he is supposed to have paid $50,000 ransom. Maybe, though, he didn't pay.

Al went to his reward on the afternoon of March 23. The body was found in the mansion, in the top-floor hall. The right arm was outstretched toward a door leading to the observation balcony. His pockets had been turned inside out and the pocketbook taken. Beside the body lay a gold ring set with jade—Lillien's own ring—and a quarter, a dime, a nickel, and a penny. Also a small cigar box.

The table in the library was littered with various "evidence." There were two decks of cards, with the king of spades upturned, ash trays, a pair of gray gloves that fitted Lillien and two revolvers. No gun was found on the body.

So the king is dead, and somebody else is probably sitting on his throne. We hear that things aren't so good in the smuggling racket, but whether this is due mostly to the business depression, or to the fact that Al Lillien isn't running the works any more, we do not know.

:-: Culbertson on Contract :-:

HOW TO LOSE TRICKS.

BY ELY CULBERTSON.

World's Champion Player and Greatest Card Analyst.

OFTEN the finest analysts in the world are stumped when they are shown a hand and asked how a certain contract was made; but they are not stumped for long, as it is not hard to visualize the mistakes which might be made by the defense. The situation becomes a little more difficult when they are asked to analyze a hand on which a declarer was set, as this player has 26 exposed cards with which he can manipulate and it is only human nature to subconsciously eliminate all of the more involved "boners."

The other day I was given the following hand and asked how it was possible for South to be defeated at a contract of four hearts:

|-----------|-----------|-------------|--------------|
| ♠ A 10    | ♠ K 8 6 3 | ♠ A K 7 6 4 | ♠ 6 3        |
| ♥ K Q J 2 | ♥ N       | ♥ 9 7 5     | ♥ Q 7 5      |
| ♦ J 8 5   | ♦ W       | ♦ 10 3 2    | ♦ A 4        |
| ♣ J 8 2   | ♣ S       | ♣ 8 6 3     | ♣ A 10 9 4   |
|           |           |             | ♣ K Q 10 7 5 |

At first glance it really seems impossible. The defense have no short suits and no crossruff can be established, and the declarer can make the hand either by leading out trumps or by crossruffing. As a matter of fact, almost anything he does will give him 10 tricks. The matter was further complicated by the fact that the best contract seemed to have been reached—albeit a contract in which neither player held a strictly bidable suit. Such accurate bidding, it seemed, must be backed up by some knowledge of play, and I could not understand any declarer failing to take 10 or even 11 tricks with the combined North and South hands. However, after considerable thought I finally worked out the solution, and it developed that it was correct.

The opening lead, of course, was the king of spades, which was won in dummy with the ace. The declarer then laid down the ace king of diamonds, on which he discarded two spades, and led a small club, which East refused to win. This trick was won by declarer with the queen (I did not go so far as to suspect that the 9 of clubs was finessed) and the 9 of hearts led. This card was, of course, finessed and won by East with the queen. A spade lead now reduced declarer to the ace and 10 of trumps and the 10 of hearts was led, the king in dummy winning. A club was the next play, East's ace holding the trick. The queen of diamonds now drew the last trump out of declarer's hand and his lead of the high club was ruffed by East, who now was able to cash his 10 of diamonds for the setting trick.

I think my readers will agree that this type of analysis is far more difficult than the analysis of some complicated squeeze play. Incidentally, I have not yet learned the identity of the South player but I did learn that the game was a rubber game and that the opponents went out on the following hand with a small slam. I am inclined to think that South got what was coming to him.

At the present time much interest is being shown in the coming international matches. Three years ago a team composed of Mrs. Culbertson, Theodore A. Lightner, Waldemar von Zedtwitz and I journeyed to England to play a match with a picked British team in the first international test. We played 200 boards in the course of which we amassed a lead of some 5,000 points. I think I can safely say that we won not because of the superiority of our play but because of the simplicity and effectiveness of our bidding.

The English had not learned to bid, principally because what they considered "artificial conventions" were not to their liking. As Colonel Buller, captain of the team which we defeated so often, put it, "the British believe in calling a spade a spade." This may be very fine, but it is not good bidding.

The bidding tactics of most of the English players have undergone a change since that time; more and more of them are adopting the Culbertson method of America. However, in a recent book, the views of the English diehards are set forth by Captain Ewart Kempson, who is a member of the team representing the south of England, which team defeated the north of England team in a 100-board duplicate match. It seems that the north of England were playing the approach-forcing system, while the south of England were playing no system at all. This fact Captain Kempson seems to interpret as a victory for the non-system followers. Personally, I regard it as proving nothing at all, since it is obvious from a study of the hands that the players from the north were far from well grounded in sound bidding tactics. I will use one hand as an example:

North, dealer.

East and West vulnerable.

In room No. 1 Colonel Buller of the south of England sat West.

His partner was Mrs. Evers. The bidding went as follows:

|      |      |
|------|------|
| East | West |
| 1♠   | 1NT  |
| 3NT  |      |

The hand was of course set 2 tricks, as North opened a diamond and 6 tricks were taken in that suit. Captain Kempson's criticism is as follows: "Had Mrs. Evers called initially as per captain's orders (two no-trumps) the south would have made 12 tricks, as a spade would have been opened." I do not believe that any comment is necessary on a statement as manifestly absurd as this. It was only luck that South did not hold the six diamonds rather than North.

In room No. 2 Mr. Troidahl and Mr. Fox of the north of England were sitting East and West. The bidding at their table went as follows:

|       |      |       |      |
|-------|------|-------|------|
| North | East | South | West |
| Pass  | 1♠   | Pass  | 2♣   |
| 2♣    | 2NT  | Pass  | 3♥   |
| Pass  | 4♣   | Pass  | Pass |

It is obvious that this bidding is far better than the bidding put up by the south of England—up to a certain point! Mr. Troidahl's pass of the four-club bid was a terrible bid. With his partner able to open the bidding and able to respond to his first takeout with two no-trump (incidentally, a fairly strong bid), there could be little doubt that the hand should play for game. Actually, of course, five-odd were made, as the spade finesse proved successful.

There were many other such hands where the bidding put up by the north of England was far superior to that put up by the South, but time and again they failed to take advantage of the more powerful weapons at their command and missed game after game.

The above does not mean that I do not consider the English formidable opponents—they are extremely skillful card players and, as a matter of fact, seem to reach most of the biddable games and slams in spite of their rather haphazard system. I look forward to an extremely interesting and exciting contest.

TROUSSEAU LINGERIE

The Trend Favors Lace-Trimmed Undies In Satin, Crepe or Chiffon While Negligees Feature the Trim and Tailored Line

OF COURSE, the Bride has been planning her lingerie for months and probably just selecting individual garments here and there when she saw something particularly delectable to attract her attention. But brides and every other fashion-minded woman will have a difficult time resisting this season's array of lingerie.

The fashion world has been hit by the ensemble idea and we find that almost every nightgown has its accompanying jacket. The popular fabric for the new nighties seems to be satin—and they're nearly all lace-trimmed. For actually sleeping, the nightgown seems to have eclipsed the pajama almost entirely. Of course, stunning lounging pajamas are still very much in evidence and quite in demand.

Brassiere and pantie sets, also in combinations of satin or crepe and lace are brief and very, very dainty. For those who still prefer the one-piece chemise, we suggest the new bias cut models that fit without a wrinkle under the new frocks.

Some of the very latest lingerie is sketched on this page today. We wish we had room for more, but the garments shown are representative of the newest creations.

CHARMING NEW NIGHTGOWNS

THE one of tea rose crepe satin sketched above has its matching jacket. The gown boasts the new high square neck, heavily bordered in deep ecru lace, to match the applied lace on the front of the gown. It is bias cut and features a slight train, edged with the lace. The brief jacket is lace-trimmed, too, and has elbow-length sleeves that are shirred in puff effect. The simple and effective negligee of aquamarine chiffon is cut on surplice lines and is caught by a tie at the waistline. Wing-like pieces of chiffon fall from shoulder to hem and are outlined by narrow folds of satin. Over a pajama of pale chartreuse crepe is worn a princess coat of deep purple velvet, caught at the waist with an old gold clasp. There are cape sleeves and the entire coat is bordered with velvet ruching.

THE LINGERIE GROUP

AT THE extreme left, a dainty gown of tea rose satin with a high round neck, has its opening held by a narrow satin bow. The back is slit to the waistline and the gown is heavily encrusted with ecru lace motifs. A lovely brassiere and panties set of peach-colored satin, is lace-trimmed. The brassiere is a narrow uplift model with the lace used as a border at top and bottom. The step-in, almost entirely of lace, is joined to the satin, following the outline of the lace motif. Cut on bias lines, the simple chemise of pale blue flat crepe boasts trimming of lace and drawn work. And here is a secret! To take off a few pounds quickly, we advise the one-piece foundation garment, sketched on the figure in the chair. It combines brocade, lace and perforated elastic. The brassiere, with a low back, is entirely of lace, and there are wide elastic pieces over each hip.

Do not fail to read the remarkable story of President Roosevelt's Georgia farm where he has been proving the practicability of his agricultural theories for over three years. The Georgia agricultural extension service, a part of the university system, has worked closely with him in the development of the farm. The full story appears exclusively in another section of today's Constitution.

THE BEGINNING OF REFORESTATION! One of the president's "recovery acts"—the reforestation bill which has given employment to 200,000 men, is one of the theories that President Roosevelt has proven to be practical by his experiments carried on quietly on his Georgia farm. E. B. Doyle, under whose supervision the work was done, is shown beside a 3-year-old pine tree planted on waste land.
